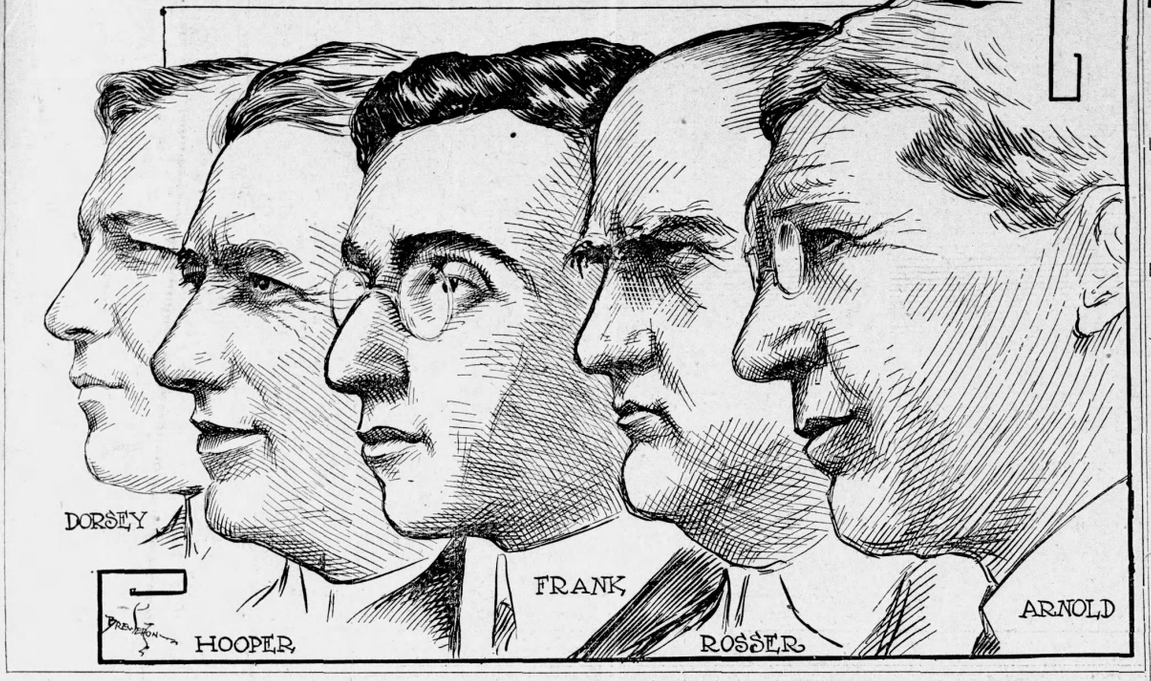
FRANK'S CHARACTER MADE ISSUE BY THE DEFENSE

LEO M. FRANK AND THE LAWYERS WHO ARE BATTLING OVER HIS LIFE



ACTION A CHALLENGE TO STATE TO PUT UP WITNESSES IN REBUTTAL WHO OTHERWISE COULDN'T TESTIFY

Lemmie Quinn, Foreman in Metal Room, Tells the Jury He Visited Factory on Saturday, April 26, and Found Frank at His Desk Writing at 12:20 o'Clock, the Very Minute Almost That State Claims Mary Phagan Must Have Been Killed

EFFORTS TO SHOW EXPERIMENTS OF WITNESSES WHO RE-ENACTED CONLEY'S STORY BRING FIGHT

Judge Roan Delays Decision Until Both Sides Can Submit Authorities—Dr. W. S. Kendrick Declares Dr. H. F. Harris Was Guessing in Conclusions He Gave About Mary Phagan's Death—Three School Mate Friends of Frank Tell of His Good Character

The character of Leo M. Frank was put in issue Wednesday morning by his attorneys during the fifteenth day's session of his trial for the murder of Mary Phagan.

While not unexpected the fact that the defense has thrown down the bars and challenged the state to put a blot on the character of the young factory superintendent was decidedly the feature of the morning session. Generally the defense in important criminal cases does not put the defendant's character in issue, for few people can stand the searching investigation to which the accused is generally subjected by detectives. Since Frank was first accused of the Phagan murder there have been constant rumors that the detectives have found witnesses who are ready to attack the character of the accused. These witnesses, if the detectives have found them, could never have testified had the defense not paved the way by putting his character in issue and practically challenging the state to its weaknesses. This action on the part of the defense means that Frank's attorneys are confident that the defendant's life will stand the white light of investigation.

The direct case of the defense is almost finished. When the noon recess was taken Wednesday, Attorney Luther Z. Rosser and Reuben R. Arnold expected to be through with all except character witnesses in less than a day's time.

The defense scored an important point Wednesday, when Lemmie Quinn, a factory foreman, declared that he saw Frank in his office, writing at 12:20, almost the exact time that the state claims Frank killed Mary Phagan. Quinn was still on the witness stand, when court adjourned for the noon recess, and the indications were that the completion of his direct and cross examination would occupy an hour and possibly two hours of the afternoon.

Alfred L. Lane, who went to school with Frank at Pratt institute, a New York merchant, who resides in Brooklyn, was the first witness to take the stand and tell of Frank's good character. He came to Atlanta especially for the purpose of testifying.

ATTORNEYS CLASH OVER EVIDENCE.

Philip Nash, of Greenwood, N. J., and Richard A. Knight, of Brooklyn, N. Y., both schoolmates of Frank, both testified that his character was excellent. No other character witnesses were put up during the morning. Attorney Arnold stating that the three who testified had come a long ways and for that reason he had called them early.

Efforts of the defense to get before the jury experiments made by four men, who re-enact d Jim Conley's story, as told on the witness stand, at the pencil factory, taking part in the conversations and movements hat Conley claims he participated in, brought a vigorous protest from Solicitor Dorsey.

The solicitor contended that the court had declined to permit the evidence in regard to Conley's pantomime reproduction of his own story and that to admit the experiments made by the defense would be a direct reversal of his former decision. He declared that if the evidence is admitted he will seek to rebut it with Conley's own pantomime, previously ruled out.

Attorneys Reuben R. Arnold and Luther Z. Rosser both replied eloquently and authorities were cited on both sides. Judge Roan finally decided to postpone his decision until afternoon, when further authorities could be assembled and arguments heard. The point will be bittery contested. Dr. William Owens was on the stand when the argument took place, it being the purpose of the defense to show through him that Conley could not have acted the part he claimed within the time alleged and that his story was therefore impossible.

Dr. W. S. Kendrick testified as the first witness Wednesday morning, characterizing Dr. Harris' conclusions as given in reference to Mary Phagan as guesses. He was cross-questioned at length by the solicitor.

Dr. William Owens was called and had taken th estand as the defense's first witness on the day, Wednesday, when he consented to give way to Dr. W. S. Kendrick, another witness, who was in a hurry to leave the court.

Dr. Kendrick said he had been practicing general medicine for thirty-eight years and was not a specialist of any sort. He was elected the dean of the old Atlanta Medical college twenty-seven years ago, he said, and was the founder of the Atlanta School of Medicine. He gave Dr. H. F. Harris his first position as a professor of medicine, he said, and also gave him his first position as a professor of bacteriology and he had taken a special course in Philadelphia. In answer to hypothetical questions Dr. Kendrick followed the other experts put on the stand for the defense, characterizing every important feature of Dr. Harris' testimony as "guess work."

Dr. Kendrick discussed conditions in Mary Phagan's body, the hemorrhage, and the blow on the head. He discussed them the conditions reported in Mary Phagan's stomach. He said that though he is not a stomach specialist, he has been lecturing on diseases of the stomach for thirty-five years.

NO DEPENDABLE OPINION.

Dr. Kendrick said, in answer to one of Mr. Arnold's questions: "I have explained to my class, probably 1,000 times, that each stomach is a law unto itself." He said that no dependable opinion as to the length of time food has been in the stomach could be formed from an examination of the contents after death. He does not think, he said, that there is an expert in the world who could form such an opinion that could be relied on.

Solicitor Dorsey attacked the witness vigorously on cross-examination. The examination was interrupted by frequent tilts among the attorneys.

After a few preliminary questions, the solicitor put to the witness a long hypothetical question regarding the stomach and its various functions, in an effort to make the witness commit himself on an opinion as to the length of time food found in a certain state had been in the stomach. Dr. Kendrick replied that he couldn't advance an opinion. "I am not a specialist and not an expert on the stomach," said he. "I am only a practitioner of medicine."

"There are very few experts on the stomach in Atlanta, are they not, doctor?" asked the solicitor.

NOT STOMACH SPECIALISTS.

"Yes, there are only a few; but they are more than we need," answered the witness.

"Is Dr. Westmoreland a stomach specialist?"

House Impeaches Sulzer While Wife Takes Blame; N. Y. Without a Governor

Mrs. Sulzer Made Desperate Effort to Save Her Husband by Declaring That She Was Responsible for It All

EXPECTED TO REFUSE TO QUIT OFFICE PROMPTLY

Question Arises as to Whether Governor Must Vacate Office Pending Final Settlement of Charges

(By Associated Press.)

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 13.—William Sulzer, of New York state, was impeached today by the assembly. This action raised a vital question, as to whether, under the constitution, the governor must vacate office pending final adjudication of the impeachment issue by the senate and the court of appeals, sitting jointly as a trial court.

Indications are that he will contest bitterly the theory of the opposition that he becomes automatically barred from exercising functions of the office the moment the articles of impeachment are formally presented to the senate and that he will be disqualified from resuming the duties of executive until the court of impeachment fails to sustain these charges.

This afternoon, eight hours after assembly adopted the impeachment articles, the governor had not announced his intention.

SMILES CHEERILY.

When Mr. Sulzer reached the capital he smiled cheerily to correspondents and posed for a battery of camera men. "It's a fine morning, gentlemen," he said.

Lieutenant Governor Martin H. Glynn came into Albany from his summer home during the forenoon and went to his newspaper office as usual. He seemed to comment on the situation. If Governor Sulzer is deposed, Mr. Glynn will automatically take his place.

The fact that the various state departments and bureaus are divided in their allegiance to the executive and the Democratic organization which is seeking to depose him stimulates interest in the complicated situation. The possibility of two men endeavoring to discharge the functions of the chief executive at the same time suggests a chaotic condition that the courts alone will have power to deal with.

Governor Sulzer according to a close friend, already has drafted a letter embodying reasons for refusing to turn over his office to Lieutenant Governor Glynn in anticipation of such a demand after the senate has received the articles of impeachment. The senate was not expected to meet until late today.

ALL-NIGHT SESSION.

The vote of seventy-nine to forty-five came after an all-night session and after the governor's wife had made an eleventh hour effort to save him at the risk of sacrificing her own reputation. Organization leaders who had sparred

SENATE SAVES LAWS FOR PURE PRIMARIES

Bill Emasculating Primary Law Blocked in Upper Branch

The state senate Wednesday morning blocked the house bill which provides that the law changing the time registration books can close before election from sixt days before a primary to a date not later than June 15 before the primary. The bill was passed by the house Tuesday, referred to the senate committee on general judiciary, and passed upon unfavorably by that committee.

When the bill was reported Wednesday morning Senator Tarver moved that the unfavorable report of the committee be disagreed to. The motion brought on a heated discussion in the course of which Senator McNeil denounced the supporters o fthe bill as false legislators working for their own interests and not the interests of the state.

Both Senator Tarver and Senator McNeil admitted that the bill helped those members of the general assembly who intended to try for re-election. Senator Tarver declared that he was not one of these, while Senator McNeil state id his speech that his legislative days would be over on the 14th of August, 1914.

"The only motive of those who favor this bill," said Senator McNeil, "is to benefit the members of the general assembly, yes, ourselves. The members of the general assembly should run on state and not local issues, but by this bill they will be elected before the summer session of the general assembly and their constituents will have no chance to find out what kind of legislators they are. As the present law is they are elected immediately after the adjournment of the legislature and their actions are fresh in the minds of the people. I know of no class of legislators who seek to pass bill save those who are in fear of losing their jobs."

When the motion to reconsider was called the ayes were 22, the nays 18. President Anderson ruled that inasmuch as the unfavorable report of the committee was agreed to, the bill was virtually dead. It will come up no more in the senate this session.

A signal honor was paid Senator Miller, the champion of the adopted tax bill, Wednesday morning, when the senate passed a resolution requesting him to transmit his speech on the measure to writing, have it printed, and request the newspapers of the state to publish it. The resolution was introduced by Senator Perry and passed immediately. The senator said he thought Senator Miller's explanation of the law the best that was given in the legislature.

The chief business of the senate, other than the election law bill, was in passing a house bill which amends the section of the code regarding appropriations for the agricultural department.

GOV. SLATON WILL BORROW $475,000 OF ATLANTA BANKS

Six Banks Come to Aid of the State of Georgia and Lend Sums at 3 Per Cent Interest to Pay Teachers

BANKS LOSE HEAVILY ON EACH OF THE LOANS

Governor Slaton Says That Every Penny Borrowed Will Be Used to Pay Portion of Salaries Due Ga. Teachers

Six Atlanta National banks have arranged immediately lend to the state of Georgia $475,000 at 3 per cent interest. To do this these banks must borrow the money in New York and pay therefor interest at the rate of 5 3-4 per cent in addition to being forced to keep a big reserve in New York which runs the rate they must pay up to between 6 1-2 and 7 per cent.

It was through the efforts of Governor Slaton that the banks were induced to make their offer. The governor wrote to the various banks of the state inviting them to participate in the loan, but nowhere outside of Atlanta did he receive a proposition which contemplated a rate of interest lower than 4 per cent and then only on a small loan.

The money which will be turned into the state treasury as soon as the notes can be executed, will be used to pay a part of the overdue installment checks will be sent out to the ordinaries in each county for distribution among the teachers.

The banks and the amount to be supplied by each are: Atlanta National, $200,000; Fourth National, $100,000; American National, $75,00; Fulton National, $50,000; Lowry National, $25,00, and Third National, $25,000.

Of these banks the first four mentioned are state depositories, but this fact does not make it incumbent upon them to make a financial sacrifice in order to accommodate the state. The last two named banks are not state depositories.

Governor Slaton stated Wednesday morning that every penny of the loan would be used to pay the teachers a part of their 1913 salaries.

SENATE MAY ADJOURN BEFORE WORK IS ENDED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—Democrats and Republicans of the senate are earnestly considering the advisability of a recess of congress until November 1 after completion of the tariff bill and passage of the currency bill in the house.

The senate today resumed consideration of the agricultural schedule, taking up Senator Gronna's amendment to increase the duty of 6 cents a bushel on corn to 10 cents.

The oats amendment was rejected as were proposals to insert meal and oat feed.

Fear of Prohibition Said To Have Caused O'Neal to Defy Warnings of Party

Alabama Governor Believed to Have Appointed Clayton Because He Was Afraid of His Legislature

APPOINTEE WILL NOT BE RECOGNIZED BY SENATE

Congressman Clayton Will Be Allowed to Argue Before the Credentials Committee, but Seat Seems Improbable

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 13.—The unexpected action of Governor Emmett O'Neal, of Alabama, in appointing Congressman Henry D. Clayton to the senate in the face of legal advice that such appointment is illegal, is arrtibuted in Washington to a fear on part of Governor O'Neal that the Alabama legislature will reenact a state-wide prohibition bill, in the event it in called in extra session to provide machinery for the election of a senator as required by the seventeenth amendment to the federal constitution. The Alabama governor was sharply criticised by Democrats today for his apparent willingness to jeopardize the tariff bill in order to combat the prohibition issue in his state.

It is regarded as practically certain that Governor O'Neal's commission of Clayton as United States senator, will not be accepted by the United States The consensus of opinion in the senate, without regard to politics is that Governor O'Neal was without legal authority to appoint a successor to the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Johnston. The senate judiciary committee is of the opinion that the only legal way in which the vacancy can be filled is by means of a special election, and Governor O'Neal is without authority to call a special election until the state legislature provides the necessary machinery.

In the ordinary course of events the Alabama legislature will not meet in regular session until January, 1915. If a special election is to be held the governor must call the assembly in extra session, and that he has not done this is believed to be due to a fear that the legislature may pass a prohibition bill.

The situation with regard to the vacancy from Alabama as it reflects upon the control of the senate by the Democrats is aggravated by the serious illness of Senator Culberson, of Texas. It is believed in Washington that the Texan will be unable to attend further sessions in the senate this year, if he ever recovers, so that with the vacancy from Alabama and the absence of Culberson the Democ*ratic control of the senate is reduced* to an uncomfortable margin that may imperil the tariff bill.

With one vacancy and one absentee the Democrats will have forty-nine senators, as against forty-four Republicans, and one Progressive. However, Senators Randell and Thornton, of Louisiana, classified as Democrats will vote against the tariff bill, because of the free sugar provision. Their defection will reduce the Democratic vote to forty-seven and increase the Republican strength to forty-six. If the Progressive votes with the Republicans each party will muster forty-seven votes on the bill, provided all are present. An absent Democrat on the final vote might defeat the bill.

In connection with Governor O'Neal's reported fear of prohibition, it developed here today that the legislature which he now hesitates to call in extra session to legalize the election of a senator is the same legislature that repealed Alabama's former prohibition law. However, about fifteen legislators, most of whom voted for the repeal of the law, have died or resigned from the assembly, so there is a possibility that prohibition might be re-enacted in the effort of another session.

FIREMEN FACE DEATH TO STOP ARMORY BLAZE

Amid Popping of Army Cartridges, Fire Eats Way to Big Company Magazine

Within a few feet of 9,000 pounds rounds of ammunition, a slow-burning fire smoked and blazed for half an hour Wednesday at noon on the top floor of the armory section of the auditorium-armory, at Courtland and Gilmer streets.

As Fire Chief Cummings looked through th emain entrance on the top floor, cartridges were sputtering and popping, and the volume of smoke seemed to indicate that the fire had spread through the room.

On the top floor was stored 60,000 rounds of ammunition, and for all the chief knew every cartridge was in danger of exploding. The truth was, that only the ammunition stored in the rooms of Companies C and D was in danger. But neither the chief nor anyone else could be sure of that, with the smoke filling the room until every object was hidden.

The stray bullets kept sputtering and popping around, like so many firecrackers, and for a few minutes the chief and his men waited at the door. Then, they ducked into the room, to find the fire was making fuel of the thousands of rounds of ammunition.

What they found were heaps of clothing burning in the rooms of Companies C and D and a box of ammunition in each room, each box containing 4,500 rounds.

The stray cartridges, those which had been left in the pockets of the uniforms which hung in the company rooms, could do no damage. With nothing to offer resistance, they merely popped like harmless fireworks. But fire would have had a greatly different effect upon the 9,000 rounds stored in the two boxes.

There the cartridges were packed as tight as though thtey were fitted into a gun barrel, and if the fire had continued and these cartridges had exploded, the armory would have been riddled with bullets.

The fact that the chief and his men waded through the smoke and put out the blaze among the clothing is the

POSSE HUNTING NEGRO WHO SHOT WHITE MAN

Great Excitement Near Leesburg Where Jossey Was Killed by Negro Farmer

ALBANY, Ga., Aug. 13.—R. T. Jossey, a well known young farmer of Lee county, was shot and instantly killed Monday night by Dock Mathis, a negro, in the car of his brother-in-law, Berry Wallace. Jossey and several other men who live near Philema were riding home from Leesburg.

They stopped at the house of Dock Mathis, whose son, W. L. Mathis, several days before had difficulty with Berry Wallace over a mule which the negro had unmercifully beaten. Wallace had wipped the boy for beating the mule and had since learned that the boy's father, Dock Mathis had secured a Winchester with which to secure revenge for the boy's whipping.

The party Monday stopped at Dock Mathis' home with the intention of securing possession of the rifle. They called Dock Mathis out to the road, but when he saw the auto full of men he turned back, saying, "Wait until I get my shoes."

Jossey said, "Wait, Dock, and I will go with you." Whereupon he got out of the automobile and followed Dock Mathis to the house. Dock slammed the door in Jossey's face and the boy, Will Mathis, began shooting at him and the party in the automobile from a window. Dock Mathis opened the door slightly and pushed a rifle through the crack, shooting Jossey in the right breast. The sheriff at Leesburg was imuediately notified and a posse formed. All the negro's family had left before the posse arrived. The country near Leesburg is now being searched. Trouble is feared should the negroes be caught.

White House Guard Stops Intruder; He Was Chief of Police

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13. — While President Wilson was sleeping in apparent security early today, an intruder leaped the fence of the White House grounds and stealthily made his way in the direction of the presidential chamber before he was discovered.

Under cover of darkness, the trespasser, dodging through the shrubbery of the grounds, had gained the corridors of the White House itself before a policeman arrested his progress. This was all the policeman did arrest, however, for the intruder was Superintendent of Police Sylvester. The head of the force was out on a personal inspection to discover the efficiency of the guard thrown around the chief executive of the nation.

Near the close of the Taft administration the number of police detailed to guard the White House and its environs was cut down sharply until now only twenty-one members of the metropolitan force are on duty during the twenty-four hours.

Major Sylvester determined this morning to discover whether the night shift was sufficiently large to detect and prevent any attempt to enter the White House. He expressed himself today as entirely satisfied with his inspection.

City Marshal Formerly Had Task, but Street Superintendent Is Favored

ROME, Ga., Aug. 13.—The city council of Rome has amended its civic code and given the right to the superintendent of the street department or superintendent of the city chaingang to whip convicts on the city chaingang.

Heretofore it has been necessary to take the prisoners to the city hall and have the city marshal administer corporal punishment. There was some opposition to the new rule, and there is considerable public sentiment against the corporal punishment of convicts.

TAX EQUALIZATION IS PASSED BY CLOSE VOTE

Curious Incidents and Apparent Defeat Marks Passage of Administration Bill

After three hours and a half of debate marking the most bitter and most sensational fight of this session, the house Tuesday afternoon passed the Anderson-Miller tax equalization substitute of the senate when Speaker W. H. Burwell, of Hancock, broke the tie of 85 to 85 by voting aye. Immediately there was a demonstration by the adherents of the measure that the vigorous pounding of the speaker failed to stop for several minutes.

The bill was taken up at 3 o'clock, when the lower assembly convened for its afternoon session, and the debate by both sides lasted until 5:30 o'clock, when the previous question was called and the vote began a few minutes later.

After the first ten names were called the vote was 7 to 3 against the bill, and tax reformers became decidedly uneasy for fear the same ratio would continue. From then on, however, they forged to the front and at one time were eleven votes to the good. Here the tide turned again and it was nip and tuck down the third and last column of the roll call, slowly but surely the lead of the victors was cut down and when the letter "S" was reached the tie came, nor could it be broken.

At the conclusion of the vote it stood 86 to 83 against the bill. Then two things happened that changed what seemed to be certain defeat into victory. One member of the house found that he had voted "no" under a misapprehension and changed to "aye," getting down the lead against the measure to one. A second member was not in the house when the roll was called, but reached the capitol just in time to cast his ballot in favor of the bill, thus tying the score. He had been reached by phone at the Majestic hotel and immediately rushed to the capitol in an automobile. It was then that the tie was broken by the speaker and the bill became a law so far as the legislature is concerned. It now needs but the signature of the governor.

MOVED TO RECONSIDER.

When the result was announced Representative J. R. Sheppard, of Sumter, and Representative A. S. J. Stovall, of Elbert gave notice for a motion to reconsider. Both were ruled out of order by the chair, as under the rules only a move to reconsider immediately can be recognized in a senate amendment. Ice member was called upon to show his authority for the ruling, which he did, reading the rule in full. No other motion was offered by Mr. Sheppard and Mr. Gower, of Crisp, moved to adjourn. The "ayes" and "nays" were called and the motion lost by a scant margin. Again there was a general clamor for recognition and Mr. Blackburn, of Fulton, was given the floor. His move was to adjourn to a time certain, a motion that is debatable, and instantly Mr. Wohlwender, of Muscogee, began to debate the question.

Every member recognized at once what it meant, for they had seen Mr. Wohlwender filibuster before. He went into a lengthy discussion of the motion of the gentleman from Fulton, praising it from every angle and entreating his colleagues to vote for it. His efforts to keep off the reconsideration was successful. A second motion to adjourn came within fifteen minutes of seven, when it was too late then to block the passage of the bill, and the house made a break for the doors.

EFFECT CERTAIN.

The success of the advocates of tax reform is expected to play an important part in the passage of special appropriations through the senate. It is a well known fact that the upper house has held up consideration of these measures in order to see what the house would do with the tax bill. From this it would appear that many special appropriations that would otherwise have been tabled at best, are almost sure to pass through the action of the house in providing revenue to care for each item.

Governor John M. Slaton, who sent a special message to the general assembly Thursday urging tax reform, declared Tuesday night that the thanks of the entire state are due the Georgia legislature.

In concluding his statement, the governor said:

"Another feature in the effort to establish sound business methods must give pleasure to every Georgian without regard to past political faction or difference. The general assembly thought only of the public weal and rose to heights above every consideration other than the welfare of their state. The members who had been utterly opposed politically were found shoulder to shoulder for or against the bill as their consciences dictated. The patriotic course occasioned by this discussion will be a source of benefit to Georgia.

"Whenever her vital interests are at stake let her lawmakers be patriots and not partisans.

"One word of warning. The appropriations must be paid by the people, and we should never forget the labor and sacrifice required to pay the taxes which we spend. He who recognizes and by his acts expresses this thought will win the lasting gratitude of his people.

"The spirit of this day, which proclaims the highest and best thought of the state, and at a time when it is most needed, will be a blessing to future generations."

When Greek Fought Greek Peanuts Filled the Air

Bloody Battle Between "Goober" Roasters Ends in Big Feast for Newsboys

"When Greek meets Greek—what becomes of the peanuts? No, it's not a riddle, and everybody who saw this fight which took place Monday afternoon at the corner of Forsyth and Marietta streets knows that the newsies got the peanuts.

It all happened pretty quick, but provided much excitement for a large crowd of spectators. City Clerk Walter Taylor saw it all from his window at the city hall, and he vouches for the story.

Nobody knows what started the fight. Greek met Greek, each wheeling pushcarts filled with roasted peanuts, and all of a sudden a lively fight began. The crowd collected quickly, and when the victorious Greek decided to quite he had to dive through a thick wall of people.

Then the real sight began. The vanquished peanut vender was in a towering rage. Waving his arms excitedly above his head he called down anathemas on the head of his opponent, and vowed dire vengeance. His eyes lighted on the conqueror's push cart. With a bound he was beside it, and, still hurling vicious-sounding words into the air, began to batter in the glass sides of the peanut case.

Every time he hit the glass he cut his hands and wrist, and finally one crashing blow severed the veins in the right wrist.

The blood began to flow, and the Greek became more and more excited. Every time he flung his arms about his head the blood spattered all over him. He started to run down Marietta street, turned into the alley between the city hall and the gas company's building, and doubled back, leaving a zig-zag trail of blood.

On Marietta street again, the offending pushcart caught his eyes once more, and, rushing back, he overturned it, scattering peanuts far and wide. The hot coals set fire to the bags and a little conflagration started. The bloody Greek made off again, but a few yards off fell down, faint from loss of blood. Somebody sent in the emergency call for the Grady hospital ambulance, and the Greek was carried there to have his arm dressed.

At the corner of Marietta street and Forsyth street, the newsboys held a council. "We want them peanuts," was the finding of the conference, but they hesitated. Finally, the leader yelled at City Clerk Taylor. "Can we have these peanuts?"

"Sure," said the city clerk with a generous wave of his hand. "Help yourself," and in less than a minute the newsies had divided the spoils of war, and the sidewalk was clear, the policeman having ordered the original victor to take his shattered pushcart somewhere else.

Ferrer's Fortune

LONDON.—The night before Francisco Ferrer, the famous Spanish anarchist, was shot by King Alfonso's order in the trenches at Montjuich, near Barcelona, in October, 1909, the doomed man wrote a farewell message to his friends, concluding, "Do not quarrel over my estate, and above all, do not go to law." He had left nearly all his vast fortune for the furtherance of his one ideal, a reformed educational system in Spain.

A woman who was once very dear to the dead man went against his wishes in regard to going to law, and the Seine tribunal upheld her action by awarding her a verdict for $25,000. She is Mlle. Leopoldine Bonnard, now a typist in London, and her story is a sad as well as an extraordinary one.

Ferrer met her in Paris very nearly thirteen years ago, when she was but a girl of seventeen, and the two went through a secret "marriage" ceremony on September 21, 1899, at Barcelona, before a "Masonic Company" of eighteen persons, half of whom were women. The couple swore to honor and respect one another, and by their love lasted and for some years all went well. A boy, Riego, was born, now eight years old, and in 1903 at the child's birth, according to Mlle. Bonnard, Ferrer made over a sum of $25,000 in shares for its maintainance. This amount, lodged at the Paris Credit Lyonnais, was after Ferrer's death claimed by the family, hence the present law suit which, after dragging on out of court for months, came to a sharp ending.

An eloquent address on behalf of the young mother, who started life as a school teacher, resulted in a verdict in her favor for the full amount claimed.

FRANK'S CHARACTER MADE ISSUE BY THE DEFENSE IN TRIAL

cialist?" asked the solicitor. Dr. Westmoreland had testified previously for the defense.

"Well, I've been his family physician for thirty years."

"I didn't ask you that. I asked if he is a stomach specialist."

"He is a surgeon," said the witness.

"Is Dr. Hancock, a surgeon for the Georgia Railway and Power company, a stomach specialist?" asked the solicitor. Dr. Hancock also had testified for the defense.

"No, sir."

In answer to other questions, Dr. Kendrick disclosed the fact that all practitioners of medicine and of surgery possess a certain practical knowledge of the stomach, although very few of them are stomach specialists.

CLASH BETWEEN COUNSEL.

Solicitor Dorsey then put another hypothetical question, giving the conditions found in Mary Phagan's stomach and the report upon its contents, and asked Dr. Kendrick again if he could not venture some kind of opinion as to how long the cabbage had been in her stomach. Dr. Kendrick said he could not hazard such an opinion. The witness explained in answer to questions that certain general principles regarding the functions of the stomach and digestive apparatus are recognized, as well as tables on that subject compiled by scientists. In answer to one of Solicitor Dorsey's questions, Dr. Kendrick retorted: "I can't digest cabbage at all, for instance." Solicitor Dorsey admonished the witness that did not answer his question. Attorney Arnold addressed the court. "I think, your honor, that it's very pertinent," said he. Solicitor Dorsey addressed the court. "This man has a dyspeptic. Probably he is," said the solicitor. Dr. Kendrick interposed, "No, sir." Attorney Arnold concluded by saying: "It's just his way of jumping on everybody who appears in this case." He said further that the witness was old enough to be Mary Dorsey's father, and his testimony should be credible, and Solicitor Dorsey retorted, "Yes, that's right."

Solicitor Dorsey then put another question to Dr. Kendrick regarding digestion, and the witness replied that in the normal stomach digestion begins as soon as the food enters. There followed several questions of a technical nature, until Dr. Kendrick replied to one, "I don't know."

Attorney Arnold interrupted. "He says, your honor, that he's not a laboratory man."

"Yes, I know he does, and so do you. You've already got it in the record," said the solicitor.

WAS HOMER TAUGHT?

"Isn't it true, Dr. Kendrick," asked the solicitor, "that Homer excelled all the men who taught him?"

Attorney Rosser turned around to Mr. Dorsey. "Nobody excelled Homer," said he, referring to Homer. There followed a little side debate as to whether Homer had any teachers or not. The solicitor contended that the history said Homer had 5,000 teachers, and that finally he grew wiser than all of them.

"It's true, isn't it, Dr. Kendrick, that students sometimes excel the master?"

"Yes," answered Dr. Kendrick.

"The process of digestion is not complete until hydrochloric acid is found in its free state in the stomach. Is that correct, doctor?"

"Yes, I have taught that."

"When the descending scale begins, the process of digestion is complete, isn't it?"

"I don't know as to that."

"Isn't it true that the hydrochloric acid means that digestion is finished?"

"It is reasonable to say so—yes."

"When you find undigested food and a small degree of hydrochloric acid, it means that digestion is hardly complete, doesn't it?"

"Yes."

"It is an irresistible conclusion, isn't it, doctor?"

"Well, I should say it was the general rule."

"You would be obliged to come to that conclusion, wouldn't you, doctor?"

"I don't know. As I have said, as a matter of fact, there is a law unto itself. I personally wouldn't eat cabbage at all, because it makes me sick each time I eat it."

"Well, I guess a Welsh rarebit would make you sick, too, wouldn't it, doctor?"

"I never saw a Welsh rarebit. (Laughter in court.)

"There are certain fundamental principles that govern the stomach, aren't there?"

"Yes, I should say so, but I still say that every stomach is more or less a law unto itself."

"There are four stages of digestion, aren't there?"

"I am not a stomach specialist. I haven't read anything on digestion in ten years."

"How long does it take an ordinary stomach to digest turnips?"

"I never tested it."

"You don't mean to say you try every principle of medicine on yourself, do you?"

"No."

"Well, you do know how long it would take to digest turnips in an ordinary stomach, don't you?"

"I should say from three to four hours, like an ordinary mixed meal."

"Don't you know that Dr. Crittenden of Yale university has made an elaborate study of the subject of digestion?"

"Yes, and I think these specialists sometimes make mistakes."

QUESTION RULE OUT.

"Oh, of course, fallibility is the attribute of the humble. Isn't it, doctor?"

"To this question, Attorney Arnold objected vigorously. He said that it was improper. Solicitor Dorsey replied that it was no more improper than Dr. Kendrick had accomplished digestion. Then followed a hot wrangle among the attorneys, which finally subsided when the court ruled that Solicitor Dorsey's question and his comment were both improper and should be stricken from the record.

"The solicitor propounded the following hypothetical question: "Suppose a child about thirteen or fourteen years old ate cabbage about 11:30 o'clock in the morning. Suppose her body was found at 3:30 a. m. the following morning. Suppose the tongue was out, there were deep indentations on the neck, a small wound in the back of the head, one eye discolored, the under clothes bloody, the body stiff, all the blood in the body settled on the lower side as it lay on the ground. Suppose you knew the small intestine was clear for six feet below the stomach. Suppose you had every indication that digestion had been progressing favorably. Suppose you found starch granules undigested. Suppose you found the acidity at 32 degrees. Wouldn't you venture an opinion as to how long the cabbage had been in the stomach before death?"

NO MAN COULD TELL.

"I should say emphatically that no living man could have said how long the cabbage had been in the stomach before death. And if you care to hear it, I will give you my reason for saying that."

Solicitor Dorsey indicated that he didn't care to hear the witness' explanation, but Mr. Arnold interrupted, insisting that Dr. Kendrick should be allowed to explain. If Solicitor Dorsey didn't want the explanation, the defense certainly did; and he thought the jury was entitled to have it. Dr. Kendrick proceeded.

His explanation in substance was as follows: "That taking the case of Mary Phagan, for instance, if in thirty minutes after she ate her cabbage and bread she was alarmed by something, digestion would have been almost completely arrested. He said if she had lived six hours after the alarm, there would have been practically no progress in the digestion. He said that he had frequently had patients whose digestion had been arrested by violent emotions, or sometimes by violent heat in summer; and he had found undigested food in their stomachs from ten to twenty-four hours later.

Dr. Kendrick declared, in answer to other questions, that he would consider himself "the greatest surgeon living" if he could examine a body ten days after death and get any definite idea as to how long after eating a certain meal the person died. He declared that he did not believe it was possible to tell anything accurate even in two or three days.

"You and Dr. Westmoreland and some of the others are very bitter toward Dr. Harris, are you not?"

NOT BITTER TOWARD HARRIS.

"I call on anybody to say that they ever heard me utter a bitter word against Dr. Harris. I have given him everything he has except the position on the board of health."

"And Dr. Westmoreland gave him that, didn't he?" asked the solicitor.

"Yes."

"And Dr. Harris has still got it, hasn't he?" asked the solicitor.

"Yes."

Attorney Arnold examined the witness again, and exhibited the cabbage taken from Mary Phagan's stomach.

"Leaving out the acid, are things like that," said he, "this cabbage looks like it had hardly been chewed at all, doesn't it?"

"Yes."

HARD TO DIGEST.

"Cabbage chewed no more than that would be terribly hard to digest, wouldn't it?"

"It certainly would."

"Dr. Kendrick, you say every stomach is a law unto itself?"

"True or false, I've been teaching that for many years."

Mr. Arnold asked the witness about laboratory men, or chemists. Dr. Kendrick replied that he had a young man who had been practicing only eighteen months, who considers as good as anyone else for chemical analyses of the stomach.

Mr. Arnold brought out the point that laboratory men usually work under the regular practitioners.

"Ten days after death, what becomes of the hydrochrolic acid by the process of asmosis?" asked Mr. Arnold.

Dr. Kendrick said he did not know.

"What effect would formaldehyde have on the pancreatic juices?"

"I don't know."

Dr. Kendrick was excused.

DR. OWENS CALLED.

Dr. William Owens, who described himself as a physician and a real estate operator, was called to the stand.

"Did you make certain tests at the National Pencil factory to determine"—

"We object," said Solicitor Dorsey.

"Wait till you've heard the question," said Mr. Arnold.

"Oh, I know what it will be," said Mr. Dorsey, "and I object right now."

Mr. Arnold addressed the court. "Your honor, we want to show that these gentlemen have gone through certain movements and have made certain conversations, following verbatim conversations which Conley alleged to have occurred and movements which he claimed to have made. They've used the same steps, the same elevator, the same metal room. In the same building. What is the difference between that and the testimony given by the expert accountants on the financial sheet?"

SOLICITOR'S OBJECTION.

"This is not an expert matter," said Mr. Dorsey. "Your honor recently ruled out evidence that we tried to put in, as to the time it took Jim Conley, one of the real actors in this matter, to go through the movements and conversations which he described. And now these gentlemen want the jury to hear the details of this farce which these others have gone through. I say that it is thoroughly inadmissible."

"Well, put your question, so we can see," directed Judge Roan.

Mr. Arnold addressed the witness. "You have gone through certain movements at our request in the National Pencil factory, have you not?"

"Well, I just kept the time and followed along," said the witness.

"Who was with you?"

"A Mr. Wilson, who I think is with the express company; Mr. Brent and Mr. Fleming."

"What did you carry?"

"Brent carried a 110-pound sack."

Solicitor Dorsey objected. "We tried to show, your honor, how long it took Jim Conley to execute these movements, and it was ruled out. And now they want to put in the testimony of this builder who had no part in the actual crime."

Mr. Arnold interrupted. "The gentleman always tries to show that your honor has done something to him. And then he almost cries about it and uses that as an argument. At the time that Conley made the demonstration at the factory he was only at the third stage of his lying, and since then he has put in many new features. Then he denied seeing Mary Phagan. He denied seeing Monteen Stover. He denied having heard any screams or having heard footsteps toward the metal room. And he left out many extremely important statements which he gave when on the stand."

Attorney Hooper objected to the use of the word "lying." Judge Roan directed Mr. Arnold to couch his objection in more admissible language.

SAYS DECISION IS REVERSED.

"Your honor, when we were presenting our case," said the solicitor, "we not only asked Conley about the time it took him to carry the body down, but also other witnesses. If you admit this evidence, it is a positive reversal of your former ruling. Isn't the testimony of the man who actually went through it himself better than that of a man who held a watch while others did it?"

"Mr. Dorsey, if the question of time come up before," said Judge Roan, "I will rule with you. I don't remember that the time came up, though."

"Well, if it does go in, we will expect to bring it up again in rebuttal, your honor. You will be called on again to pass on the admissibility of this evidence."

Attorney Arnold commented "that question would have to be decided then," produced a paper depicting the scene of the carrying of the body to the basement, as told by Conley, and directed Attorney Leavitt, one of the subordinate counsel for the defense, to read it to the jury.

The document, some 2,000 words long, was arranged much in the form of a moving picture scenario upon Conley's testimony, using Conley's words from the transcript of evidence given in court, according to Attorney Arnold.

Mr. Leavitt read it to the jury. It went in as a part of the question, the witness being expected to answer that he and his companions had enacted the scenario. A copy of the paper was furnished to Solicitor Dorsey. At the conclusion he objected again to the question. "They've got things mixed up, here. There are some things in here that actually occurred Monday and Tuesday. This witness has no right to testify about it anyhow. It is purely a matter of guess."

ATTORNEYS ARGUE AGAIN.

Attorney Arnold followed with a long and eloquent argument, contending that it was not an opinion that Dr. Owens had been called to testify about facts. The witness took the scenario, he said, and saw men re-enact Conley's story; and he held a watch to time them while they followed it as faithfully as possible.

Solicitor Dorsey answered, contending that the witness was not an expert and that he therefore could not give the results of tests.

"Experts can give the results of tests under certain conditions," said he, "but this man is not an expert. Is this man an expert at strangling girls to death? Is he an expert at running elevators? Is he an expert at carrying dead bodies?"

Judge Roan replied to Mr. Dorsey: "I'm not going to let this man give an opinion. He's like the rest of Mr. Arnold makes, though. Suppose a man walks from here to Whitehall street. If he testifies as to the time he thinks it took him, he is advancing an opinion. But if he was timed by a watch and testified as to the actual time it took him, he is testifying to fact. I am inclined to let the time in."

Solicitor Dorsey argued again, still claiming that it was a matter of opinion.

Judge Roan said: "You don't need to argue on that, Mr. Dorsey. I'm with you on the opinion part of it. I'm not going to let an opinion in."

"It's expert testimony, your honor, or none," said the solicitor. "These twelve men are twelve times as competent to judge, as the witness."

"Mr. Dorsey, if there is nothing in the record's testimony to show the speed with which he moved, I am inclined to believe this is nothing but guesswork," said Judge Roan.

Attorney Arnold addressed the court. "I am going to show that this man went to the pencil factory and went through this operation as quickly as was reasonably possible. Would your honor hold that we are bound by the simple statement of this lying negro?"

ROSSER ENTERS DEBATE.

Attorney Rosser entered the debate for the first time. "It's impossible for any man to duplicate a feat in exactly the same time as any other man did it, or any man to duplicate a feat that he himself did. If I walk to my office, the presumption is that I do it in an ordinary time. In the law of experimentation, it is assumed that it took a man an ordinary time to do anything." He concluded by saying: "We only want to show with approximate accuracy the length of time of this operation, and leave it to the jury to decide just how accurate it is."

Solicitor Dorsey challenged the attorneys for the defense to produce any authority in support of their contention. He declared if their proposition was being urged by anyone of less than their well known and recognized ability, the court would not consider it for a moment.

To this Judge Roan replied that he had no more respect for their ability than for any other lawyer's ability. He said he would have to decide the question as nearly as he could according to the law.

DECISION DEFERRED.

Solicitor Dorsey based his argument on the ground that a non-expert witness cannot testify as to the result of experiments made out of court. He read several decisions in support of that contention. Attorney Arnold took the decision on which Solicitor Dorsey laid particular stress and read a little further down and made it appear in support of his contention, where the decision said that an act or a series of acts may be re-enacted under practically the same circumstances as sworn to in court, and the results testified to.

After arguments on both sides had proceeded for several minutes and the attorneys on both sides continued sending for authorities, Judge Roan suggested that the witness be excused until the afternoon; that the attorneys in the meantime assemble their authorities and finish their arguments at a time to be agreed on during the afternoon session. Dr. Owens said that it would be convenient for him to return during the afternoon, and the judge's suggestion was agreed to by both sides.

DALTON ATTACKED AGAIN.

The defense called seven witnesses from Gwinnett county, who declared that they knew C. B. Dalton and would not believe him on oath. Only one or two of them were cross-examined, admitting that he had been a member of years—about fifteen—since they knew Dalton. In each instance Mr. Arnold asked on the redirect examination if the witnesses thought his character had improved, upon his own admissions; the witnesses replying that they did not think it had. The witnesses were A. O. Nix, an attorney, of Lawrenceville, who testified that Dalton had been tried in the city court of that place for stealing; Samuel Craig, a farmer, who owns 500 acres of land; B. M. Patterson, another farmer, who owns 700 acres; Robert Craig, farmer, owning 800 acres; Ed Craig, farmer; T. L. Ambrose, a merchant and farmer, and J. P. Byrd, merchant.

The attack on Dalton's character was followed by character witnesses for Leo M. Frank, the accused.

CHARACTER PUT IN ISSUE.

Alfred L. Lane, of Brooklyn, N. Y., a merchant, was the first witness. He was the first witness. He said that he had known Frank for fifteen years. He said that from 1898 to 1902 they were associated intimately in Pratt Institute. Solicitor Dorsey interrupted, declaring that he did not see the relevancy of the questions unless the defense was putting the defendant's character at issue.

"That's exactly what we are doing," said Mr. Arnold.

The witness continued that he did not go to Cornell with Frank, but saw him there. Asked the formal questions as to the defendant's character, the witness replied "Good," with emphasis. He was not cross-examined by the solicitor. Mr. Lane stated that he arrived in Atlanta at 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon to testify for Frank.

Philip Nash was called. He testified that his home is in Greenwood, N. J., and that he is a clerical engineer for the New York Telephone company.

"Did you come to Atlanta to testify in this case?" asked Attorney Arnold.

"I did."

He testified that he had known Leo M. Frank since 1898; that they were associated four years as schoolmates; that frequently they were in the same class rooms when the witness was between sixteen and twenty years of age. The witness testified that the general character of the accused is good.

Richard A. Knight, of Brooklyn, N. Y., stated that he is a consulting engineer with an office of his own. He testified that he had known Frank six years while going to school with him at Pratt institute, in Brooklyn, and at Cornell; that he was in the class ahead of Frank at college; that his reputation was good.

With these three character witnesses the defense dismissed that subject for a while. Attorney Arnold stating that the three had come a long way to testify and that he did not wish to hold them any longer than was necessary.

EX-OFFICE BOY CALLED.

The defense next called Frank Payne, aged sixteen, formerly an office boy employed by the National Pencil company. He testified that he severed his connection with the factory eight or ten months ago, and that he is not working now nor going to school.

"Do you remember last Thanksgiving day?" asked Attorney Arnold.

"Yes, sir."

"What kind of a day was it?"

"There was snow on ground." In answer to further questions he said that he worked for the pencil company until about three weeks after Thanksgiving, and that he had worked for them two or three weeks before Thanksgiving—a total of about six weeks in all. He testified that Herbert Schiff had sent him upstairs to work in the box room on that day.

"Where were Frank and Schiff when you were given these instructions?"

"In the office."

"What did you do on the fourth floor?"

"Moved some boxes."

"Who was there with you?"

"Jim Conley."

"What time did you leave?"

"About 11 o'clock."

CONLEY LEFT AT 10:20.

"What time did Conley go?"

"About 10:20 o'clock."

"Did you go down to Frank's office when you left there?"

"Yes, sir."

"Were Frank and Schiff in there?"

"Yes, sir."

"What time did you leave the building?"

"About 12 o'clock."

"Did you see a negro in the hallway as you went down the stairs?"

"No, sir."

"On Saturday afternoons when did you usually leave?"

"Between 3:30 and 4 o'clock."

"Did you ever know Frank to have any women in his office?"

"No, sir, he never did."

"Did you ever at any time see him buy drinks for any women?"

"No, sir."

The boy testified that when he left on

Saturday afternoons he always left Schiff and Frank in the office. He said in answer to other questions that his dinner hour was from 1 to 2 o'clock, and that Frank usually left for dinner about 12:30 or 1 o'clock and returned about 2 o'clock.

"Where did you stay most of the time?"

"In Mr. Frank's office."

"Was Mr. Schiff there, too?"

"Yes."

"Did they ever send you to Montag's in the morning?"

"Yes, all the time."

"How long did you stay?"

"Ten or fifteen minutes."

"What work was Jim Conley doing on the fourth floor on Thanksgiving day?"

"He was working all around up there."

Frank Payne, the witness, was cross-examined by Attorney Hooper.

"What was your work?" asked Mr. Hooper.

"I was general office boy."

"Were Mr. Frank and Mr. Schiff in the office all of the time?"

"Yes."

"When did you leave the employ of the factory?"

"Seven or eight months ago."

"Why did you leave?"

"Because I got a better job."

"You say you left on Saturday afternoons between 3:30 and 4 o'clock?"

"Yes."

"You say you left Mr. Frank there, and Mr. Schiff?"

"Yes."

"You never went back there at night?"

"No, sir."

"Did you ever see any beer bottles around the office?"

"No."

"What time did you get there Thanksgiving morning?"

"Between 7 and 8 o'clock."

"Who was there when you got there?"

"Mr. Holloway."

"You say Jim Conley left the building at about 10:30?"

"Yes."

"What time did you leave?"

"About 11 o'clock."

"Did you come back?"

"No."

"Then you don't know whether Jim came back or not?"

"No."

"You are not certain he left the building at all, are you?"

"I saw him go downstairs."

This closed the cross-examination.

QUINN TESTIFIES.

Lemmie Quinn, foreman of the metal department of the National Pencil factory, was called next by the defense. Quinn greeted the accused with a smile as he took the stand. He was questioned by Mr. Arnold.

"Where do you work?"

"At the National Pencil factory."

"What do you do there?"

"I am the foreman of the metal department."

"Is that where Mary Phagan worked?"

"Yes."

"Is that where Mr. Barrett works?"

"Yes."

"Do you recollect Memorial day, April 26, 1913?"

"Yes!"

"Was the factory running that day?"

"No, it was a holiday."

"Do you recollect when Mr. Barrett claims to have found the blood spots and the hair?"

for service in adjutant gen eslarde'ao

"Yes."

"Did he point them out to you?"

"Yes."

TALKED OF REWARD.

"Did Mr. Barrett ever make any statements to you as to the reward, if Mr. Frank should be arrested?"

"Yes, he mentioned it to me several times."

Solicitor Dorsey objected. Judge Roan overruled him.

"What statements did he make to you in regard to the reward?"

"He asked me if Frank was arrested, and didn't know whether they could or not." I told him I was not a lawyer know whether they could or not.'

"What sums, if any, did he mention to you?"

"He mentioned $2,700 and $4,500."

"How often did he mention the reward to you?"

"I don't remember. It was so numerous that I can't recall them."

TELLS OF BLOOD SPOTS.

Quinn continued that he would not have noticed the blood on the metal room floor unless his attention had been called to it. At this point Attorney Arnold asked his associate counsel if they had in court the planks taken from the metal room, and the machine lathe, and when informed that they had not he asked that they be sent for. Quinn said that he couldn't tell whether the blood was fresh or old.

"Do people often get hurt in the factory?" asked Mr. Arnold.

"Every once in a while somebody gets his hand hurt."

"Do you remember a fellow named C. P. Gilbert being hurt?"

"Yes, about a year ago an emery wheel flew off and struck him in the forehead."

"Did he bleed profusely?"

"Yes, very."

"What was done with him?"

"First he was carried to the dressing room that I use, and then he was taken to the office, and finally to an ambulance."

"Did he have to pass right by this spot where the blood was found?"

"Yes."

"And he was bleeding very much?"

"Yes."

"Didn't a boy get his hand badly cut on that floor?"

"Yes. That was some time after Gilbert was hurt."

"And he had to go by that spot to get to the office?"

"Yes."

"And you saw his hand bleeding?"

"Yes."

"Was this boy's cut so bad that he had to be taken to the hospital?"

"Yes, he went to the Atlanta hospital."

"Did you ever notice blood around the women's dressing rooms?"

"I don't remember ever seeing any."

"You have a number of women working there, haven't you?"

"Yes, about 100."

"Did you see the white stuff over the stain?"

"Yes, but I don't know what it was. There is a white substance up there that you use, isn't there," and it often gets scattered, doesn't it?"

COULDN'T IDENTIFY HAIR.

The witness replied yes, and in answer to another question said he had never known of the floor of the factory being scrubbed. He continued that only five or six hairs were found on the lathe, and that he, Quinn, could not tell the color. He said that Mary Phagan had worked in his department since Christmas, and that her hair was very much the same color as Magnolia Kendedy's.

He often saw girls curling their hair at a jet about ten feet from the lathe where the hair was found, said Quinn. The hair easily could have been blown that way, said he in answer to a question. He described Mary Phagan's appearance, and said that he saw the body at the undertaker's. He last saw Mary on the Monday before the tragedy, he said, when she was laid off because they were out of certain material.

"Do you know Henry Smith?" asked Mr. Arnold.

"Yes."

"When did you get your pay for that week."

"Friday night."

"And when were you due to return to the office?"

"Monday, as Saturday was a holiday."

VISITED FACTORY AT 12:20.

The attorney had the witness go into a detailed description of his movements on Saturday. Quinn said he arose at 7 o'clock and went to town with his wife and baby to have the baby's picture taken. He was at the photographer's at 10 o'clock by appointment. Leaving the photographer's, he walked by the Globe Clothing company's place, by Wolfsheimer's market and a soda fountain, then returning to his residence at 31-B Pulliam street. He left home about 11:45, he said, going to Wolfsheimer's market, making the trip by Pulliam, Garnett and Whitehall. He made a number of purchases and ordered the packages sent home. He had hurried to reach the market by 12, thinking that they might close, he said. From the market he went to Benjamin's pharmacy, and was there at about 12:10, o'clock. He went from there to the pencil factory, as he often did on holidays, he said. One of the purposes of his visit, he said, was to see Schiff. He did not find the street door locked. He did not see Mary Phagan, Monteen Stover or Jim Conley. He found the door of Frank's outer office and his inner office open, and in answer to a question about the safe said he thought it was open. He arrived at the factory about 12:20 o'clock, he said.

He said that he was in Wolfsheimer's market about twelve minutes. As well as he could remember, the 12 o'clock whistle blew just before he left there, he said. He told of the purchases that he made. He was at Benjamin's three or four minutes, he said.

"Did you see anybody beside Mr. Frank at the pencil factory?"

"No, sir."

"Where was Frank when you saw him?"

"In the inner office."

"What was he doing?"

"He was writing."

"Did you say anything to Frank?"

"Yes, I said 'Good morning, Mr. Frank.'"

"Did he say anything to you?"

"Yes, he answered, 'Good morning.'"

The witness testified that then he asked Frank if Mr. Schiff would be in, and that Frank replied he didn't think Schiff would be down that day. Quinn testified that he remarked then to Frank, "You see you can't keep me away."

"About how long were you in the pencil factory?"

"About two minutes."

"Where were you when you next noticed the time?"

Quinn gave the name of a pool parlor a block and a half distant from the pencil factory.

"Do you recollect Harry Mulsby?"

"Yes."

"Where is his place of business?"

"Two doors from ours."

"Did you speak to him that day?"

"Yes."

WENT TO BUSY BEE.

Quinn then told of going into the Busy Bee cafe and seeing Miss Corinthia Hall and Mrs. Emma Freeman there. He related that incident as Miss Hall and Mrs. Freeman already had told it.

"What did you want to see Schiff about?" asked Mr. Arnold.

"I wanted to see him about a bet we had on a baseball game."

Quinn told of the two young women going out of the Busy Bee cafe and going into Malaby's place to telephone. In answer to a question by Attorney Arnold, he said he looked at the Western Union clock in the pool room when he arrived there, and the clock showed 12:30 then.

"Did you talk with anybody in these parlors?" asked Mr. Arnold.

"Yes, I talked to a Mr. McMurray." Quinn continued that he stayed in the pool parlor until 1:15 o'clock. Then he left there and went to the Atlanta theater to purchase tickets. After buying the tickets, he returned to the pool room.

"Who is John Rainey?" asked Mr. Arnold.

"He works in my department."

"Were you at the pencil factory Sunday?"

"Yes."

"Whom did you talk with?"

"Mr. Darley and Mr. Montag."

"Which Montag?"

"I don't know."

A DIFFERENT SUIT.

Attorney Arnold asked the witness what kind of clothes Frank had on when he was in the office Saturday. Quinn said as well as he could remember Frank had on brown trousers and was in his shirt sleeves."

"Did you see Frank on Sunday?"

"Yes."

"What kind of a suit did he have on?"

"Black or blue."

Quinn stated that he chipped off a piece of wood from the back door of the basement for Detective Starnes. He explained that the white stuff smeared on the stain upon the metal room floor was used on the machines in the metal room and that frequently it was spattered on the floor while being taken from one machine to another in buckets.

"Did you see Mr. Frank on Monday?"

"Yes, I saw him Monday afternoon."

"What suit did he have on then?"

"A brown suit, as well as I can recollect."

At this point Attorney Arnold directed the witness' attention to the diagram of the pencil factory tendered by Solicitor Dorsey. Quinn pointed out on the diagram his department.

Attorney Arnold indicated "No. 7" on the diagram, and asked: "Is this the place where Barrett pointed out the blood to you?"

"Yes."

SAW NO BLOOD MONDAY.

"Did you see any blood near the lathe or under the lathe on Sunday or Monday?"

"No."

"Did you see anything that looked like where blood had been washed or smeared over?"

"No."

"Did you see any hair on the running lathe?"

"No, sir."

"Is the floor dry near the ladies' dressing room?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you ever see any blood there?"

"No."

"If blood had been washed up near the turning lathe, why couldn't it have been washed up just as well near the dressing room?"

Solicitor Dorsey objected to the question and was sustained by the court. Attorney Arnold smilingly remarked that it was a conclusion, but such a good one that he could not resist the temptation to ask the question.

"Does this diagram show anything of the Clark Woodenware basement?" Attorney Arnold referred to that rear portion of the first floor.

"No."

Solicitor Dorsey contended that the diagram did show the door giving entrance to that portion of the building.

At this point court adjourned for lunch.

FOUR CHILDREN BITTEN BY PUPPY ARE TREATED

Son of W. Woods White and Others Were Exposed to Dog With Rabies

Four children who were bitten by a mad puppy commenced the Pasteur course of treatment for rabies at the state board of health laboratory Wednesday morning. They are Delos White, aged fifteen years, son of Woods White, of 32 Howard street; John McMillan, aged fifteen years, of 241 Peachtree; Gabriel Burton, of 88 West Linden street, and Annie May Coleman, the eight-year-old daughter of a household employe at the McMillan home.

Another child is said to have been bitten, but its name could not be learned.

The children were bitten while trying to give the puppy medicine because he was sick. They paid practically no heed to the bites, a sthey thought he wanted to play. The puppy was owned by John McMillan.

The mother of the McMillan boy thought the puppy behaved strangely, and called in the police to investigate. The officer shot the dog and carried its head to the bites, as they thought he after an examination, it was discovered the puppy had rabies.

In contradiction of the old theory that a mad dog will not drink water, Mrs. McMillan says this puppy never refused water.

CITY SUED FOR $50,000 BECAUSE OF FILTERS

Atlanta Steel Company Asks Damages When Pond is Filled by Mud

The city of Atlanta is made defendant in a suit for $50,000 alleged damages brought in superior court Tuesday by the Atlanta Steel company. The steel people allege damages resulting from filtering reservoirs owned by the city on the Chattahoochee river above their plant.

The mud caused to settle in reservoirs, ayer the steel company's attorneys, Payne & Jones, by the chemical filtering process is cleaned out at regular intervals when an extra large amount of water is turned into the reservoirs. Then the water and mud, it is alleged, comes down into a large pond owned by the steel company and settle there, having already filled the pond.

These conditions, it is alleged, have resulted in the company's losing $20,000 through having to shut down the plant, and $30,000 in damages to the pond and machinery.

The steel company has been operating at its present location for eight years, it is alleged, and only within the last year has the mud been coming down into the company's plant. The company states it can prove its prior right to its position.

In April a claim was filed in the Atlanta Steel company's name with the mayor and city council of Atlanta asking for redress and damages, but their request was declined.

BIG CANNING PLANT IS PLANNED FOR COLUMBUS

COLUMBUS, Ga., Aug. 13.—Columbus is to have a big canning plant. J. C. Armour, of Eufaula, and A. W. Armour, of Columbus, are planning to form a stock company for the purpose of opening such an establishment in this city at an early date. They are looking over the local territory with a view of ascertaining conditions and locating a site on which to erect a plant, and it is announced that they are well pleased, and that a large factory will be erected here.

LONDON ORGANIST TO APPEAR IN ATLANTA

Eugene Wyatt, of the Crystal Palace, Will Play Next Sunday

In the effort of the Atlanta Music Festival association to secure a worthy successor to Dr. Percy J. Starnes, who resigned recently, some of the best organist talent available will be heard at the auditorium during the next few months.

Eugene Wyatt, the famous organist from the Crystal Palace at London, will appear in Atlanta next Sunday at the organ recital at the auditorium-armory, although he is not a candidate for the position of Atlanta city organist.

Two organists of more than ordinary reputation have applied for the position of city organist. Clarence Reynolds, organist of the Ocean Grove auditorium, and E. Seton Blyth, the scottish organist, who is now in Burlington, N. C., are the applicants. Mr. Blyth will be here Sunday, August 24, and Mr. Reynolds on Sunday, September 7.

The Frank Trial—Frost's Magazine.

Frank's Lawyers Again Threaten Move for Mistrial

Questions Asked by Dorsey Of Office Boy at Factory Ruled Out After Argument

Attorney Reuben R. Arnold Declares That Any Further Testimony Along Lines of That Sought by the Solicitor During Examination of Philip Chambers Will Tempt Him to Move for a New Trial in the Case

With the calling of Emil Selig, Frank's father-in-law, the defense began their endeavor to prove Frank's statement in reference to his movements on the day of the tragedy.

Mr. Selig's testimony bore principally upon the time Frank arrived at his home to dinner, the midday meal, and his appearance and actions at that time.

He declared that Frank arrived home about 1:20, that he was unmarked by scratches; that his general appearance and actions were as usual; and that during the evening the accused man had been in his usual spirits and had not been either nervous or excited.

Upon cross-examination Solicitor Dorsey forced him to admit an uncertainty as to the exact time Frank arrived at the house. Mr. Selig also declared that on the following day the murder was mentioned but not discussed and that he said nothing to Frank about it. He reiterated this statement several times.

Mrs. Selig testified similarly to her husband as to the time Frank came home to dinner and his demeanor during the evening. She was closely questioned by the solicitor, who endeavored to show that while she now claimed Frank had appeared concerned about the little girl's death, at the coroner's inquest she had said he was not concerned.

At the conclusion of Mrs. Selig's testimony court adjourned until 9 o'clock Wednesday morning.

A new sensation was sprung at the beginning of the afternoon session when Philip Chambers, who was office boy at the pencil factory for some time after December 12, 1912, was cross-examined by Solicitor Dorsey in such a manner that Attorney Arnold appealed to the judge, declaring that if unfair attacks on Frank's character were not brought to an end, he would ask for a mistrial.

They boy was questioned by Arnold to show that Frank was decorous in his attitude toward young ladies in the factory. Solicitor Dorsey asked him about his relations with Frank, and certain statements he was said to have made to Gantt. The boy entered an emphatic denial.

Attorney Arnold bitterly attacked the solicitor's question, calling it decidedly unfair. Dorsey replied that he was preparing to impeach the witness by the aid of Gantt. The testimony was ruled out after a warm discussion.

Minola Knight, negro cook in the Selig home, swore that detectives and her husband tried to force her to swear lies in regard to Frank's actions both on and after the night of the murder. She declared that she had signed affidavits which were false because she had been forced. She pointed out a detective in the court room who, she said, had been one of those attempting to coerce her testimony.

The principal affidavit, signed by her, in which she quoted Mr. Frank as saying that he wanted a pistol to kill himself, was repudiated by the negress as a lie out of the whole cloth.

Magnolia Kennedy, one of the girls employed at the factory, testified that she was with Helen Ferguson when she drew her pay Friday afternoon and that Miss Ferguson did not ask for Mary Phagan's pay at that time. She said the hair found on a lathe in the machine room looked like Mary Phagan's.

A number of other witnesses were examined during the afternoon. The defense is proceeding very rapidly with the presentation of its case.

When court reconvened at 2 o'clock, the defense called the name of Gordon Bailey, otherwise known as "Snowball," a negro elevator boy employed at the pencil factory; but he did not answer. The name of Philip Chambers was called without answer.

Miss Magnolia Kennedy, employed in the metal room where Mary Phagan worked at the National Pencil factory, was called to the stand. She did not appear to be more than fifteen years old. She testified that she has worked at the pencil factory for four years.

DENIES PAY STORY.

The witness said she knew Mary Phagan and that she knows Helen Ferguson. In answer to Attorney Arnold's questions she said that on Friday before the death of Mary Phagan she went to the pay window directly behind Helen Ferguson to get her pay. Herbert Schiff was paying off, she testified, and she was standing behind Helen at the window with her hand on Helen's shoulder. Helen was at the window when she came up, said the witness. She did not see Frank around there. She declared that she did not hear Helen Ferguson ask Schiff for Mary Phagan's money.

When both had received their pay envelopes, they stood and waited together until Grace Hix was paid off and then all three went down the stairs together and out of the building. Miss Kennedy declared that she went down Forsyth street and up Hunter, and that she knew

DOCTORS SAY DISEASE KILLED FRED FLANDERS

McNaughton Could Not Have Given Arsenic, Prison Commission Is Informed

Asserting that Fred Flanders, of Swainsboro, died of acute nephritis, and submitting the written statements of seventeen Georgia physicians to back him up in this contention, Judge, F. H. Saffold, of Swainsboro, Wednesday morning offered to the prison commission what he termed as "additional evidence to justify a full pardon for Dr. W. J. McNaughton, who is in the Chatham county jail under sentence of death for the alleged poisoning of Flanders.

While he was engaged in reading the opinions of the seventeen physicians, who were consulted about the symptoms which have said to have attended Flanders' death, Judge Saffold suddenly stopped and dramatically exclaimed:

"Gentlemen, I feel that God Almighty is directing this matter. I don't believe that He is going to let Dr. McNaughton go to the penitentiary. I am convinced that the doctor is an innocent man."

Accompany Judge Saffold at the hearing were Rev. John S. Wilder, pastor of the South Side Baptist church, of Savannah, who has long believed in Dr. McNaughton's innocence, and Dr. M. A. Massoud, an Atlanta physician.

Judge Saffold informed the commission that he had submitted to the seventeen physicians the symptoms of Flanders just prior to and immediately after death. He had he said, told them that the deceased had suffered with dizziness, vertigo and faintness; that he had experienced a high blood pressure resulting in a surcharge of blood in the heart, and that his skin had turned red.

Based upon these symptoms Judge Saffold declared the physicians without exception had given it as their opinion that Flanders could not have died of arsenic poisoning, as is contended by the state, but that he must have died from acute nephritis.

It will probably be a week or two before the prison commission takes action upon Dr. McNaughton's appeal for a pardon.

top floor, and told Custodian H. J. Weaver, who gave the alarm.

Chief Cummings was first to arrive, and immediately after him came the firemen of engine house No. 1.

"As we got to the top floor," said the chief, "we could hear the cartridges spewing around inside. I know it's said that these loose cartridges can't do any harm. But I'm not sure of that till now, and that room filled up with smoke and popping cartridges didn't look good to me.

"We waited outside until the popping sort of stopped, and then we went in and found the flames burning in the two company rooms, the walls on fire, and those two boxes of cartridges standing over in the corner.

"The fire was one of the kind that you can't put out in a hurry, and as we were stomping round among those clothes, a cartridge lying round loose, would pop and we couldn't help wondering if we'd been shot.

"If the cartridges packed in the two boxes had exploded, there is no telling what would have happened."

The top floor of the armory is used entirely for a storage room. There the tents, uniforms, and other equipment of the national guardsmen are kept.

Down in the basement are stored 400 rounds of three-inch ammunition.

One thing which prevented an explosion that might have had a serious result.

As it was, the only harm done was a hole burned in the roof of the auditorium, and damage probably amounting to several thousand dollars because of water which trickled down from the top to the bottom floor.

The auditorium itself was not affected at all by the fire. No damage whatevebr was done to the organ.

BEGAN IN STORAGE ROOM.

The fire, according to Captain W. J. Stoddard, of company D, broke out in the storage room assigned to company D on the top floor. Only he and his quartermaster have keys to this room, and it is always kept locked. He thinks that the fire started either from a defective wire or a match that some one had carelessly dropped to the floor.

Shortly after 12 o'clock, Sergeant Wardwell saw smoke coming from the

LACK OF SUPPORT MAY CAUSE EXHIBIT TO FAIL

Inaction of Atlanta Manufacturers May Result in Abandonment of Plan

The inaction of many manufacturers who were counted on as being heartily in accord with the proposed manufacturers' exhibit in the chamber of commerce building, may cause the exhibition to fall through. Only about thirty have applied for space in the exhibit, and unless all the space is sold by Tuesday the idea will be given up.

Meantime the work on the remodeling of the floors to be occupied by the exhibit is being held back until it is definitely known whether the plan will go through. It is understood that a number of manufacturers are thinking the matter over, but it is necessary to know definitely and soon as possible.

Couple Make All-Night Ride; Married at 4 A. M.

VALDOSTA, Ga., Aug. 13.—After an all night's ride in an automobile from Perry, Fla., Miss Jennie Sidney Blair and A. L. Salter were married here Monday morning between 3 and 4 o'clock. They were accompanied by two young ladies and two young men, who helped them make their get away.

It is said there was some objections to the marriage on the part of the young lady's parents. After church Sunday night, while the old folks were asleep, the young couple and their friends got a large touring car and started for Valdosta. They telephoned Ordinary Varnedoe, asking him to get the license and perform the ceremony, which he did.

The happy couple and their friends remained in this city throughout the day, returning to their home in Florida to receive the blessings of the old folks last night.

ZEBRA-HORSE CROSS BETTER THAN MULES

Government Experts Believe They Have Discovered Best Utilitarian Breed

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—Experts of the bureau of animal industry believe they have discovered a new crossed breed of horse that will prove as tough and utilitarian as the mule, and yet have the intelligence and speed of the purely bred horse.

This belief followed experiments made by breeding "Dan" the Greavy Zebra, from the National Zoological garden, to a Morgan mare at the Maryland experimental farm of the department of agriculture. The resultant foal has been highly praised by horsemen, and the breeders are urging that the government import as many more zebras of the same strain as can be procured.

JOHN S. OWENS INDORSED AS ALDERMAN FROM 8TH

A well attended meeting of the voters of the eighth ward Tuesday night adopted resolutions strongly indorsing the candidacy of John S. Owens for alderman of that ward. At present Mr. Owens is the only candidate, but friends of W. A. Hancock are urging him to enter the race, and say he will do so.

General A. J. West called the meeting to order and stated its purpose. Edgar Watkins was elected chairman and H. F. West secretary. Speeches strongly indorsing Mr. Owens were made by several of his friends.

The meeting did not consider the indorsement of a candidate for the councilmanic place. Frank Reynolds, who has announced for the place, attended the meeting and received many promises of support.

'FRISCO WHITE SLAVE CASE IS PROGRESSING

Martha Warrington Continues Story of How Men Lured Two to Reno

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 13.—Martha Warrington was the state's first witness today in the trial of Maury L. Diggs, charged with violation of the Mann act. She continued her story of yesterday of how she, in company with Lola Morris, Drew Caminetti and Diggs slipped away from Sacramento to Reno, in hope of avoiding local notoriety and stirred up a scandal which developed into an affair of nationwide interest and entered the halls of congress.

It was not alone for Miss Warrington that a crowd took its slender chance of admission to the small court room. The next witness ready to be called was Lola Morris, whose school girl hair ribbons and smoothly moulded face gave the impression that she was considerably the younger of the two. Her story in essentials, it was expected, would be much like that of Miss Warrington, although the latter testified that Diggs was the more active in some of the quartet's preparations which she described, than Caminetti, with whom the Moris girl fled.

"What did Caminetti say?" asked an attorney once when Miss Warrington was explaining how the men had labored to persuade the girls to leave home.

"He didn't say much," she replied. "He just agreed."

WOMEN USE REPORTERS FOR MAIDEN SPEECHES

Female Voters Prepare to Go on Stump, But They Are Nervous

CHICAGO, Aug. 13.—Chicago women voters blossomed out today as stump speakers before an audience of reporters. For several weeks they have been holding classes in public speaking at headquarters of the women's party, but no outsider has been permitted in the room.

A group of newspaper men who had been refused admission to former classes were gathered outside the party headquarters, when Mrs. Charlotte Rhodus, president of the organization, invited them in.

"The women need practice and they might as well start in on you," she said. "I guess everybody concerned can stand the ordeal."

She hustled the half dozen reporters into the small hall. "I wish there were more goats for these maiden speeches, but I guess you will have to do for the present," said the president as she led the first speaker to the platform.

Graduates of the class will be used to organize and arouse interest in the city wards.

Seeking a Room?

"Where did you ever find so comfortable and cozy a room, dear? I have been in Atlanta for two years and mine is not half so airy and pleasantly situated, or nearly so large, as this one of yours is," queried Ethel the first time she called on Ruth, just five days after the latter had come to the city.

"It was the simplest thing in the world," replied Ruth, "you see, Uncle Joe told me, just as I was leaving, to be sure and watch The Journal Want Ads every day and then I would be certain to find a good room in a very short time. Well, as soon as I got here, I bought a Journal, and the Rooms-to-Rent Ad telling of this one was the third ad that met my eye. It's just what I wanted, and is so comfy it is just like home."

An Iniquitous Bill; Let the Senate Kill it.

There was smuggled through the House Tuesday morning as vicious a bill as could well be devised to rob the citizens of Georgia of their right to a pure ballot. Its plain purpose is to nullify the registration law which now safeguards our primaries against corrupt and illegal votes; its inevitable out come, unless it is duly defeated in the Senate, will be an era of machine rule and political depravity which nothing short of a revolution can overthrow.

This bill provides that State primaries shall be held not later than June the fifteenth, preceding the general election in October. The effect of this seemingly simple, but really far-reaching and sinister requirement, would be to destroy the present opportunity for purging registration lists and furthermore to give the jugglers of politics power to manipulate the date of a primary in such a way as virtually to exclude from the polls a large element of honest, representative voters.

As the law now stands, the registration books are closed six months in advance of the general election and the primary may be held not earlier than sixty days in advance of the general election. Thus the registrars are given ample time to detect and remove from their lists fraudulent or unqualified names. Thus, too, political trickery and partisanship are kept from fixing the primary for a season when the farmers are busy with their crops and cannot, except at heavy sacrifice, spare the time to vote.

But such a law as is now proposed, by requiring primaries to be held not later than June the fifteenth, would leave only a scant interval between the closing of the registration books and the day of actual voting. Indeed, under the terms of the bill which has been slipped through the House, it would be permissable to call a primary within twenty-four hours after the registration books had closed, for, this bill prescribes June the fifteenth as the latest date allowable for the primary but says nothing, as we understand it, concerning the earliest date. What more flagrant mockery of the principles of pure elections and clean government could be conceived? What bolder attempt to strike away the safeguards of honest registration could be imagined? The audacity of the thing is almost incredible. It amounts to asking the Legislature to abolish our entire system of registration and to throw open our polls to as many irresponsible, purchasable voters as the ward-heeler and boodle-bearer can command.

Furthermore, this bill requires that primaries shall be held in the spring of the year when business of all kinds is exacting and when the farmer, especially, is compelled to be in the fields. Even in towns and cities where voting places are easily accessible this would be an ill-advised season for elections but in the rural districts where a trip to the polls consumes many hours, if not an entire day, such a time would make it practically impossible for thousands of citizens to cast their vote. Are the gentlemen of the Legislature going to inaugurate a scheme that would be so monstrously unjust to the majority of their constituents? Will they tear down the present law under which primaries must be held late in the summer when the farmer has time to vote and replace it with a measure that will bar rural citizenship from a free and rightful part in the Government of the State?

The majority of the members of the House, we are sure, did not realize the import of this outrageous hoax. The fact is the bill was put through in hugger-mugger fashion without consideration or debate and without the rank and file of the members having an opportunity to know what they were voting for. Only in such circumstances could so treacherous and destructive a piece of legislation have passed muster.

It is now the Senate's duty to save the State from the grave injury and disgrace which the enactment of this bill would bring on. The wolf has been stripped of its sheep's clothing. There it slinks, manifest in its evil design and all the harm it will do, unless it is promptly killed.

For several years past, there have been repeated efforts to emasculate the registration law openly by reducing the interval between the closing of books and the holding of the primary. All such attempts have failed for the obvious reason that the people recognize the wisdom and value of this law. But there is a reactionary remnant of Georgia politics which seems determined by hook or crook to destroy this wholesome statute, if it can be done. That is the real significance of the bill which seeks to fix the date of primaries not later than June the fifteenth. Heretofore the scheme has been to move the registration period forward to the verge of the primary! now it is move the primary back to the verge of the registration period.

Should either device succeed, the people would be the losers, and what a loss it would be! Our present registration system is part and parcel of that great pure election law which was enacted in 1908, the law that freed Georgia from the menace of a corrupt and ignorant negro vote, that forbade the contribution of money by corporations to campaign funds, that required every candidate to submit under oath a statement showing in detail what money he had spent in his campaign and how he had spent it and that regulated the date of State primaries so that they could not be juggled by a political machine.

Of all the provisions of this memorable law none is more useful than that which closes the registration books six months in advance of the October election. Far from being unjust or inconvenient, this requirement is eminently fair and practical. For the registration books are opened each autumn concurrently with the tax books, so that the citizen may register at the same time he pays his taxes. It is a constitutional requirement that he pay his taxes six months in advance of the general election. Where then is the injustice or inconvenience of having to register six months in advance?

It will be well enough, as The Journal has often suggested, to provide for the permanent registration of qualified voters; but to tear from the present law its very structure and spirit as this new bill proposes would be a crime against good government and public rights.

Let the Senate kill this iniquitous measure.

Alabama's Senatorial Problem.

Alabama's Governor has chosen the shortest, though at the same time the most debatable means, to fill the embarrassing vacancy caused by the recent death of United States Senator Johnston. Assuming that the executive authority is sufficient to the needs of this situation without any special act on the Legislature's part, he has appointed Congressman Clayton to serve out the unexpired term.

If this method will stand the test which it undoubtedly must meet, well and good; for, it is the simplest and speediest way out of the Alabama predicament and, from the Democratic point of view, it affords the promptest relief to the party's jeopardized majority in the Senate. Had the Legislature been called into extra session, it would probably have conferred upon the Governor just the authority which he has independently exercised; it would have empowered him to make an appointment for the unexpired term.

But there are Senatorial students of the Constitution who seriously doubt the validity of such an appointment as the Governor has made. They contend that since the seventeenth amendment, providing for the popular election of United States senators became operative, the Governor may not take such action unless he is specifically directed to do so by the Legislature. The amendment provides in this connection that,

> When vacancies happen in the representation of any State in the Senate, the executive authority of such State shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies. Provided that the Legislature of any State may empower the Executive thereof to make temporary appointments until the people fill the vacancies by election as the Legislature may direct.

The weight of Washington opinion seems to be that the safest course the Governor could have followed in these circumstances would have been to call a special session of the Legislature. Indeed, Senator Kern, Democratic leader in the Senate, telegraphed Governor O'Neal, just before the latter's appointment was announced, urging him to call the Legislature together to dispose of this problem in manner that would be unquestionably constitutional; and Senator Overman, acting chairman of the Senate judiciary committee, goes so far as to express the opinion that Mr. Clayton "will not be seated."

Governor O'Neal, however, supports his action with argument which is at least interesting and plausible, his contention being, in the main, that the seventeenth amendment was not intended to affect the term of any Senator chosen before the amendment was adopted. The outcome of this situation will be awaited with keen anxiety, particularly on the part of the Democrats of the Senate, whose majority is so slender that they cannot afford to lose a single vote.

Theory and Practice in Bringing Up Children

BY DR. FRANK CRANE.

(Copyright, 1913, by Frank Crane.)

The trouble with most of the theories of childtraining is that the child is supposed to be located in the middle of a forty-acre lot, and to be attended by three all-wise angels, who work in shifts of eight hours each and who unfailingly know always just what is the matter and precisely what to do.

If there is anything more impractical and more maddening to a poor mortal parent or teacher than a grand educational program I do not know what it is.

Several factors are invariably left out. In the first place, there are relatives. You may determine to refrain from carrying, rocking or jiggling the baby, and to accustom him to lying in his crib without attention, but what are you going to do when Aunt Jane, who has money, comes along and insists on picking him up and showing him the boofle flowers?

You may endeavor to break him of crying and attempt to let him nerve himself to sleep; but grandma has something to say about that.

And what happens to the most rational systems of child management when the mother has four little ones cooped up in a city flat, and must take care of them and keep them from poisoning or maiming themselves, and must do this in such intervals of time as she can snatch between washing dishes, getting dinner, cleaning house, sewing and mending?

Besides, a perfectly good mother may not be physically strong. Four vigorous little personalities demanding instant care all day may reduce her to the borders of nervous prostration. And where are the grand laws of patience and prevention when your back hurts like the toothache and you are so tired you don't know your name?

Also a good mother may not be endowed with mental perspicacity and deep wisdom. A thousand times she does not know what to do. She may have real love and a high purpose, and do the wrong thing from sheer bewilderment or ignorance.

As for the school teacher, her ideal systems for developing the growing mind are usually crushed to death by numbers. Sixty children in a crowded room are too much for any human teacher. By and by she is forced to drop back into mere routine because it is impossible to give each child due care and be alive at the end of the week.

Yet, somehow, children do grow up and flourish. Weak and incompetent mothers bring up capable children, who love her and give her credit in maturer years for the best that is in them. Out of the homes of the poor come great men and noble women. Out of the overcrowded school room garden human plants rise strong and fruitful.

It is because human nature is better than any scheme for bettering it; because honest love is better than shrewd handling; because motherhood is more efficacious in its instincts than any experts are in their pedagogy and psychology; and because the child absorbs helpful forces from the atmosphere of a school that far outbalance the personal guidance he misses.

Fighting "Materialism"

(New York Times.)

One of our Paris dispatches recently reported an interesting movement in Paris led by Messieurs Edmond Rostand, Maurice Maeterlinck and Camille Flammarion. M. Rostand is a dramaturge and poet, with perhaps the best that is in them. Out of the homes of the poor come great men and noble women. Out of the overcrowded school room garden human plants rise strong and fruitful.

It is because human nature is better than any scheme for bettering it; because honest love is better than shrewd handling; because motherhood is more efficacious in its instincts than any experts are in their pedagogy and psychology; and because the child absorbs helpful forces from the atmosphere of a school that far outbalance the personal guidance he misses

SENATE REVERSED IN REDUCTION OF BUDGET

House Restores Appropriations Bill to Original Amount, Abolishing Cut

After having sustained the senate in nearly all of its 7 per cent cuts from the general appropriations bill as originally submitted the house Wednesday morning, led by Representative Crawford Wheatley of Sumter, chairman of the appropriations committee, reconsidered its action on each separate action and voted by large majorities to disagree to senate amendments. Through this action the $280,000 cut from the budget is restored and all state institutions will profit as a result if this action is concurred in by the senate.

It seemed at one time that the action could be sustained but an about turn there was when the first intimation came from Representative Bright, of Floyd, when he got the house on notice that he would take action should any attempt be made in this line on any items or if there was any attempt to increase any appropriation.

The cut on the funds given the University of Georgia and the Georgia School of Technology brought on the fight to restore the action of the senate. Sentiment seemed to change almost simultaneously with appeals from Mr. Wright Mc Wheatley, Representative B. J. Fowler, of Bibb, and Representative Henry J. Fullbright, of Berke.

VICTORY FOR COMMITTEE.

In another instant the house was in a turmoil, and despite the efforts of the minority, led by Representative Moye, of Johnson, to agree with the senate amendments already passed on, one by one they were reconsidered and as promptly disagreed to. It was a signal victory for the members of the appropriations committee who had voted unanimously in the committee room to pass the sheet as originally acted upon, and to those who came to their assistance.

The final action of the house is taken as indicative of the confidence of the majority of the members in the new tax equalization bill to increase the revenue of the state sufficiently to meet all needs and subsequently begin to make up the present deficit in the treasury.

While it is a known fact that the appropriations bill has been in the lower assembly for several days, it was not allowed to be put on its passage until the question of tax reform had been settled once and for all. In effect it was held as a whip over the house to pass the Anderson-Miller state tax bill, and there is every indication that the greatest move on the part of Mr. Wheatley served its purpose.

It will now be necessary, owing to the lateness of the date, for the house and senate conference committees to get together and agree to the mandate of the lower assembly in sustaining its original budget. That this will be accomplished before adjournment sine die is confidently forecasted by leaders of both the upper and lower houses.

At 1 o'clock the house adjourned to meet again at 3 p. m. Wednesday afternoon.

POLICEWOMEN BARRED FROM ATLANTA FORCE

Commissioners Say Reports From Other Cities Show They Have Not Made Good

The reported inefficiency of policewomen in Chicago and Los Angeles caused the local board of police commissioners to unanimously vote down the request of Chief of Police Beavers for a squad of women officers Tuesday night.

After Chief Beavers presented his request for the female addition to his force Commissioners Johnson and Carlos Mason took the floor and expressed themselves as opposed to women becoming connected with the department in any way. The former was fortified with reports from Chicago and Los Angeles, and declared that the record of women police in these places was an argument against their appointment elsewhere.

Chief Beavers made a strong plea for the passage of his motion. He argued that the women were almost a necessity in his department for the care of girls who fell into the hands of the law. In many instances, he said, young offenders could be saved from ruin by the timely and decorous influence of women.

MEN AND RELIGION BULLETIN NO. 75

Georgia Senate and Her Children

"And whoso shall receive one such little child in my name receiveth me. "Even so, it is not the will of your Father who is in Heaven, that one of these little ones should perish"

Matt. 18; 5-14

A child—

A girl—

All men would help her.

House Bill No. 4 will save girls who are children in years.

The PRISON COMMISSION has favored the Bill.

The PENITENTIARY COMMITTEE of the House has approved it.

The COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS, with WHEATLEY of Sumter as Chairman, unanimously recommended its adoption carrying a $30,000.00 appropriation.

And men believe that GOVERNOR SLATON approves the measure.

Yesterday, Tuesday, the HOUSE COMMITTEE ON RULES, whose chairman is the Speaker of the House, BURWELL, with BLACKBURN of Fulton its Vice-Chairman, put the Bill upon the Calendar; without this, the measure would have been lost. Among those helping to pass it were NUNNALLY of Floyd and SHUPTRINE of Chatham. And for it BARRY WRIGHT did splendid service.

THE VOTE WAS 115 TO 46.

The FORTY-SIX who opposed it did not do so with the thought of harming girls. They misunderstood. At heart—if they consider—they, too, approved the JONES-MILLS' BILL establishing the "Georgia Training School for Girls."

It is no one man's measure—no group of men or women can claim it—it is a law for the want of which girl children of Georgia have suffered.

You would not continue to hurt and degrade them—you, too, would help.

Today the Bill is in the Senate.

The COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS of that body, whose Chairman is Senator W. W. STARK, now has it under consideration; and the Senate RULES COMMITTEE will doubtless see that it is heard.

The President of the Senate, RANDOLPH ANDERSON, of Chatham, has long favored a Reformatory for girls in Georgia.

And since the question of taxation and finances has been settled, the only argument against the Bill has been removed.

Of it the Morning News of Savannah, has rightly said:

"It is hard to see how anybody can truthfully say that it would not profit the State to spend $30,000.00 in that way."

The Senate will doubtless pass the Bill as it was adopted by the House, without an opposing vote.

All Georgia will approve.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE MEN AND RELIGION FORWARD MOVEMENT

HOUSE IMPEACHES SULZER WHILE WIFE TAKES BLAME

ONLY 7 OTHER GOVERNORS HAVE FACED IMPEACHMENT

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—In all the United States only seven other governors have faced impeachment proceedings. These men and the results that followed were:

Charles Robinson, Kansas, 1862, acquitted.

Harrison Reed, Florida, 1868, charges dropped.

William W. Holden, North Carolina, 1870, removed.

Powell Clayton, Arkansas, 1871, charges dropped.

David Butler, Nebraska, 1871, removed.

Henry C. Warmoth, Louisiana, 1872, term expired and proceedings dropped.

Albert Ames, Mississippi, 1876, resigned.

for the time all night in fear that their program of impeachment would be wrecked by lack of votes, welcomed newcomers to the assembly chamber, summoned from New York during the early hours, and assured of victory by their presence, started a rapid-fire of legislation with the adoption of the impeachment resolutions.

Long articles of impeachment, embracing the findings of the Frawley investigating committee in substance, lay ready for presentation in the desk of Democratic Leader Levy hours before the organization created the impeachment resolution to a roll call. With the adoption of this resolution and the creation of a committee headed by Mr. Levy to prepare the articles a recess was taken. Mr. Levy and his associates went through the formality of retiring to reappear within an hour and sent the articles to the speaker's desk with a resolution that they asked be adopted.

A roll call showed the adoption of the articles by a vote of 103 to 32. A committee was appointed to acquaint the senate with the assembly's findings at the meeting of the senate scheduled for 11 o'clock this morning.

SULZER'S LAWYERS PROTEST.

It was explained to the assembly by the majority leaders that with the presentation to the senate of the articles of impeachment William Sulzer would automatically cease to be governor and Martin H. Glynn, lieutenant governor, would assume his office. Mr. Sulzer's lawyers, however, entertain a different view.

After the adoption of the articles of impeachment the assembly quickly passed a resolution appointing nine managers to conduct the impeachment proceedings on behalf of the lower house. The managers are under the chairmanship of Assemblyman Levy and include five other New York City Democrats.

Thereafter, under the head of unfinished business, the assembly took up consideration of several bills passed at the present session and vetoed by the governor. With a roll call that moved swiftly and without hitch, the first of the bills was repassed over the governor's veto.

MEMBERS SLUMBER.

Many members had been slumbering in their seats during the tedious hours of the prolonged debate. Others, buoyed no longer by the excitement of the impeachment proceedings, leaned back in their chairs and closed their eyes. By the time the first bill had been passed there were audible sounds of deep and labored breathing in some of the members asleep in their chairs. Speaker Smith, leaning forward, swept with his eyes rows of men with their heads on their bosoms and their eyes closed.

"A number of the members I take it are asleep in their chair," he thundered, bringing his gavel down with a resounding thump on his desk. "Members will please answer when their names are called."

More whacks of the gavel aroused the sleepers momentarily and the assembly took up another bill which Governor Sulzer had vetoed.

With this out of the way the assembly adjourned at 7:30 o'clock to meet again at 11 o'clock this morning.

Two hundred spectators, all who were left of a throng that surged in over whelming numbers through the capitol last night, walked out of the assembly chamber with the legislators.

The heaviest guard of uniformed police ever sent into the capitol, each armed with night stick and revolver, walked out, too, leaving the assembly chamber in solitude.

GOVERNOR DIDN'T WAIT.

In the executive mansion, where Mrs. Sulzer made last night what her friends call her "confession" to save her husband, and where Governor Sulzer sat till almost dawn waiting the verdict from the brightly lighted chamber five miles away, there was no sign of life when the legislature adjourned. Worn by weary waiting, the governor was sleeping. He went to bed before the roll call and was not wakened to be told the news.

"The governor knew pretty well what would be the result," was the only word from the executive mansion.

The governor had left word that he was not to be disturbed under any circumstances. In the light of the revelation contained in Mrs. Sulzer's declaration to Senator Palmer yesterday afternoon, Governor Sulzer's friends are inclined today to view the ordeal which confronts him with less apprehension than before his impeachment. By her assertion that she diverted part of the campaign contributions sent her husband to private purposes without his knowledge, and used them to purchase stock in Wall street, she has shorn the articles of impeachment of many of their terrors, his friends declare.

Governor Sulzer consented to permit Mrs. Sulzer's declaration to become public late last night only when he found that he could not prevent it and that it lived as a rumor on the lips of every member of the assembly in the city.

A close friend of both Governor and Mrs. Sulzer so asserted today.

MRS. SULZER MUST TESTIFY.

Mrs. Sulzer must take the witness stand in her husband's behalf before the court of impeachment, tell her story in detail and submit to examination by hostile lawyers or take the hazard that the impeachers will prove their case, the governor's friends believe. Either her reputation or her husband's, these friends fear, must suffer. They say she will take the stand if she has no other choice. They add that she besought the governor a week ago to permit her to tell her story to the public.

What attitude Governor Sulzer would take in this matter as well as toward the question of vacating his office when the senate should receive the articles of impeachment brought forth wide divergencies of views among his friends and opponents today.

The majority leaders were reasonably certain, they said, that he would not attempt to continue to hold office, but would recognize what they asserted was the law and give way to Lieutenant Governor Glynn. Louis Marshall, the governor's counsel is quoted as placing a different interpretation on the law.

According to the quoted expression of Mr. Marshall's views, "the language of the constitution is not clear on this point and Governor Sulzer could not divest himself of the benefit of the doubt by refusing to vacate the office. There has been some talk of his ordering out troops to prevent his forcible removal in case it was contemplated he should decline to surrender his office. Little credence, however, is placed by his friends in the report that he would resort to such extremity.

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR SILENT.

Lieutenant Governor Martin H. Glynn had no comment to make today concerning the impeachment proceedings.

Valentine Taylor, Governor Sulzer's counsel, and Chester C. Platt, secretary to the executive, watched closely every move by the assembly during the long hours of the night.

Two of the deputy attorney generals were there as advisers to the leader. It was said that no request had been made to the attorney general for an opinion as to the legal status of the present occupant of the executive chamber. Uncertainty as to whether Mr. Glynn would attempt to assume the duties of governor after presentation of the articles of impeachment was much discussed. Indication points to considerable delay in assembling the two houses of the legislature.

Senator Palmer, to whom Mrs. Sulzer told the story of her dealings in Wall street yesterday, confirmed the statements attributed to him today. He confided to several senators Mrs. Sulzer's declaration that she was to blame for the check transactions charged against the governor, and the story was soon the subject of excited gossip.

Governor Sulzer walked over from the executive mansion to the capitol this morning, but made no statement.

Here Are Charges That Are Made Against Gov. Sulzer

(By Associated Press.)

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 13.—Articles of impeachment against Governor Sulzer, as passed by the state assembly, make a document of over 4,000 words.

They charge the governor with violating penal laws of the state, not only in connection with the filing of an improper and incorrect account of his campaign expenses and diverting campaign contributions to the purchase of stocks, but also in connection with his alleged efforts to prevent witnesses from testifying before the Frawley investigating committee. He is also charged with attempting to manipulate the stock market by attaks on the exchange.

SUBSTANCE OF ARTICLES.

The articles are in substance as follows:

1.—That Governor Sulzer, in filing his statement of campaign expenses, set forth that his entire receipts were $1460, and his expenditures $7,724; that this statement "was false and was intended by him to be false and an invasion and violation of the statutes of the state;" that the list of receipts failed to include eleven specific contributions, ranging in amount from $100 to $2,500; that the governor's false statement made "wrongfully, wilfully and corruptly," caused "great scandal and reproach of the governor of the state of New York."

2.—That Governor Sulzer attached to his statement of campaign expenses an affidavit declaring that the statement was in all respects "a full and detailed statement of all moneys received or contributed or expended by him directly or indirectly; that this affidavit, duly subscribed and sworn to by said William Sulzer, was false and was corruptly made by him," and that he was "guilty of wilful and corrupt perjury."

3.—"CORRUPT CONDUCT."

That Governor Sulzer, "unmindful of the duties of his office, and violation of his oath of office, was guilty of mal and corrupt conduct in his office as governor and was guilty of bribing witnesses." The specific charge is that while the Frawley committee was investigating the governor's campaign accounts, he "fraudulently induced" three witnesses (his campaign manager, a personal friend and a stock broker) "to withhold their testimony from said committee" and that in so doing he acted corruptly and he was guilty of a felony.

"SUPPRESSING EVIDENCE."

4. That the governor was guilty of "suppressing evidence" in violation of the state penal code. The specific charge is that, while the Frawley committee was in session, he "practiced deceit and fraud and used threats and menaces with intent to prevent said committee from producing the attendance and testimony of certain witnesses."

5. That the governor was guilty of "preventing and dissuading a witness from attending under a subpoena" the sessions of the Frawley committee. The witness referred to is Frederick L. Colwell, alleged to have acted as Sulzer's agent in certain stock transactions.

6. That prior to his election the governor appropriated campaign contributions to his own use and "used the same, or a large part thereof, in speculating in stocks to brokers operating on the New York exchange, and thereby stole such funds and was guilty of larceny."

Among the contributors mentioned are:

Jacob H. Schiff, $2,500; Abram I. Elkus, $500; William F. McCombs, $500, and Henry Morgenthau, $1,000.

7. That Governor Sulzer promised and threatened to use the authority and influence of his office to affect the vote or political action of certain public offices, including two assemblymen.

8. That he corruptly used his authority as governor to affect the prices of securities on the New York stock exchange, in some of which he was speculating upon a margin or otherwise, recommending and pressing for passage legislation affecting the business of the exchange, "and then by withdrawing, or attempting to withdraw, from the consideration of the legislature such legislation as was pending therein—all the time concealing his identity in said transaction by a subterfuge."

In conclusion, the assembly demands that the governor answer concerning all these matters before the court which is to hear the charges, and offers to present proof of "the said matters at such time as the honorable court of impeachment may order and appoint."

Special Announcement

The course of study of Brenau has recently been revised in accordance with standards of foremost American universities and colleges. Hereafter the degree of A. B. will be the only degree granted. The requirements for admission to Freshman class are fourteen units.

Two-Year Courses

For the benefit of many girls who can remain in college only two years, courses are arranged so that diploma may be received and the title of Associate in Arts conferred at the end of two years after the high school. This is similar to the practice of the University of Chicago.

Preparatory Courses

Courses equivalent to the work of a first-class high school are offered and provision is made to receive pupils as young as fourteen years of age.

Music, Oratory, Art, Domestic Science

These subjects are especially suited to the needs of the average woman, and may be offered at Brenau as electives for the A. B. degree. Diplomas in each of these subjects are also offered.

Brenau has no competitors in the South in these special courses, and the demand for teachers who are graduates of Brenau is far greater than can be supplied.

The next term begins Sept. 11. Only a few places are still open.

Mother Goose Pantomime to Be Interesting Event

Half a hundred of Druid Hills' prettiest children will take part in spectacular conceptions of Mother Goose characters when a beautiful series of pantomimes is presented in the big Sunday school rooms of the Druid Hills Methodist church at 8 o'clock Thursday evening.

One of the most striking features will be an artistic conception of the great shoe in which the old woman who had so many children she "didn't know what to do" put all her "kiddies." There will be a real shoe big enough to house a score or more happy little girls and boys.

The pantomimes also will introduce some of the youngest "actors" that have appeared "unassisted" on the Atlanta stage when three little fellows, the oldest being just two years old, will toddle onto the stage and "Patty cake, patty cake," like the proverbial baker's man. These, of course, will be the tiniest to take part.

One of the most beautiful of the pantomimes will be that portraying "Mary's garden." Little maids will be dressed in a realistic manner to represent the poppies, violets, daffodils and other flowers of the garden.

Although it takes only a little more than an hour to present the entire series of pantimimes, nearly all of the familiar characters of Mother Goose will be shown. "Little Miss Muffet" will sit on the tuffet and run from the big spider at just the right moment. "Little Boy Blue" will be there with his horn; and "Old Mother Hubbard" and her dog—a real dog, too—and "Little Jack Horner," who'll pull out a plum from a real pie—all will be there.

Another of the most artistic and complete of the pantomimes will be that of "Four and twenty blackbirds baked in a pie." There will be a great pie out of which the birds will stick their heads when the crust is broken.

The advance sale indicates that the children will be greeted by a record-breaking audience. The Sunday school rooms, at the corner of Blue Ridge and Seminole avenues, are commodious, however, and there will be an abundance of comfortable seats for all who wish to attend.

The big stage constructed especially for the occasion already is complete, and the vari-colored costumes of the children with the elaborate properties, will make a wonderfully beautiful and artistic exhibition.

To Miss Specht

Mrs. William Stewart and Miss Emily Stewart were hostesses at an afternoon party Monday for Miss Fannie Mae Specht, whose marriage will take place this week.

Mrs. Thomas Stewart and Mrs. Robert Bruce Morrison assisted in entertaining.

Those present were Mrs. Andrews, Mrs. Specht, Mrs. Berlingham, Mrs. Flowers, Mrs. Flury, Mrs. Ritchie, Miss Sewell, Miss George, Miss Carpenter, Miss Miller, Miss Culberson, Miss Thomas, Miss Nance, Mrs. Andrew Stewart and Misses Pauline and Lucile Specht.

Mrs. Hilton Entertains

Mrs. Harold Hilton entertained at an informal bridge tea this afternoon in compliment to her guest, Miss Lelia Daley, of Texas; to Miss Genevieve Gresham, of Portsmouth, Va., and to Mrs. Fennell, of Fort Oglethorpe, the guest of Mrs. J. C. Peavy.

Pink and white roses formed the decorations for the house.

Correspondence cards were the prizes for th ehonor guests and the bridge prizes were white and gold china.

Sixteen friends wer einvited.

Proper Thing Now Is to Peel Off Soiled Skin

(From Beauty's Mirror.)

Those who abhor sticky, greasy, shiny, streaked complexions should religiously avoid creams, powders and rouges these heated days. There's no need for them, anyway, since the virtues of mercolized wax have become known. No amount of perspiration will produce any evidence that you've been using the wax. As it is applied at bedtime and washed off in the morning, the complexion never looks like a make-up. Mercolized wax gradually takes off a bad complexion, instead of adding anything to make it worse. It has none of the disadvantages of cosmetics and accomplishes much more in keeping the complexion beautifully white, satiny and youthful. Just get an ounce of it at your druggist's and see what a few days' treatment will do. Use like cold cream.

Another effective summer treatment—heat tending to cause wrinkles and flabbiness—is a skin-tightener made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in 1-2 pt. witch hazel. Its use (as a face bath) leaves no trace.—(Advt.)

ITS BOARDING DEPARTMENT

In the formative period of the life of girls who are are away from home at school, proper home influences must be exerted in the school. To meet this need, Washington Seminary, Atlanta, maintains a strictly limited boarding department for girls from thirteen to twenty years of age.

It provides for them an elegant home, as beautiful in all its appointments as the most expensive private residences. The rooms are large, nicely furnished, and almost all have private baths connecting.

Students and teachers live together as a family, under a family method of government, and the faculty is thus able to exercise a careful oversight of all the girls' interests—health, amusements, studies, and moral training.

THE EVENING STORY

(Copyright, 1913, by W. Werner.)

A PEARL PIN

It is almost the very minute of closing time and Hilda was flurried by the two insistent customers who demanded attention at the same time. For an hour a stout, important woman in green broadcloth and sealskin had wavered between two expensive pearl brooches. Then a thin young fellow in a low visored cap had rushed up for collar buttons. He didn't care what kind nor price so long as he got them quickly. The other salesgirls already had tossed black sateen aprons to the shelves behind the counter and were filing to the time clock. The cashier in the booth above was anxious to get away. She hastily wrapped up the two small articles, tossed them and the change to Hilda and scooted. Hilda passed them over to the impatient customers, then hurried out.

Two minutes later, when she was hurrying out herself, she had a sudden fear that the package handed to the man had not been flat, as though it held a card of collar buttons. She shivered, but it was too late then to make sure. And she tried to persuade herself that she merely was imagining trouble, a habit that she had acquired lately. She ate dinner in the small cafe near her rooming house without much appetite. It was not a pleasant cafe, but it was near by and cheap, two items that counted heavily when a girl was tired out at night and only able to spend a certain sum for a meal, no matter what her appetite or fancy.

Afterward she mended stockings and waists in the small room that she shared with a girl who worked at a telephone exchange. Edith worked nights and slept days, so the arrangement was convenient for both.

But this night Edith was not working. She had a day shift for a while. She was a tall, rather flashy girl. Hilda, of a demurer type, liked her and disapproved of her.

"I was going to a dance tonight," Edith yawned. "But Alf—he's a ninth cousin—was called out of town. You could have gone along."

Hilda shook her head. She liked Edith, but she didn't like the style of young men whom Edith affected. Mostly loud, with a free and easy address toat made her uncomfortable. Besides she had no clothes that by any ingenuity could be made suitable for a dance. Black serge skirts and plain shirt waists were all that her salary yielded, and even those took careful planning.

IT HAD BEEN HARD ENOUGH LIVING ON HER SALARY.

In the morning she awoke with a vague sense of something uncomfortable hanging over her, but she did not remember until she had punched the time clock and picked up the checkbook. And then she was too busy arranging stock and dusting the counters for an hour to worry.

But at 10 o'clock she looked up to see an angry woman in green broadcloth hurrying toward her and her heart nearly stopped beating. The brooch was worth $18.

The woman flung a card of collar buttons at her. "Such carelessness!" she stormed. "And I particularly wanted that pin to wear to a reception last evening! Give me my money back."

Hilda's eyes widened with apprehension, but there was nothing to do but call a floor manager and report it. Herrimon was not a good-natured man, and this morning he happened to be in a worse humor than usual. His heavy eyebrows drew together till they made a ridge of wrath. His full lips pursed together unpleasantly. "Give her another brooch of the same kind," he coldly ordered Hilda.

"Indeed, not!" stormed the woman. "I bought that to wear last night. Now, I want the money."

"Very well," said Herrimon. He took her around to the chief cashier and made out a slip of credit entitling her to the money. Then he returned to Hilda, who stammeringly tried to explain how she had made the mistake. But there was really no explanation. She stammmered into abashed silence before his scornful eyes.

"We can't afford to lose over employes' unmitigated carelessness," he said, coldly. "We expect you to make up the $18, unless the other customer returns the pin, which is very improbable. You better go up to the main office and arrange the matter."

The other girls listened in awed sympathy. Strictly speaking, it was carelessness. But each one had a dread vision of the same mistake occurring to herself. One could never tell what would happen.

In the main office they allowed Hilda a month to make up the cost of the pin. She came down dazed. It had been hard enough living on her salary. This would be almost impossible.

"Maybe the fellow that got it will come back," the other girls tried to comfort her.

"Maybe," she agreed drearily, but she had a grim conviction that he would not. She remembered him fairly well. He was young, with shrewd black eyes and a thin olive face. And he had smiled pleasantly when he asked her to hurry. She would know him again.

He did not come back. Hilda's face, always delicate and white, grew drawn. Edith would have loaned her the money in a minute, but Edith had had troubles, had been out of work for two weeks, and had a doctor to pay. Hilda's parents were dead. She had been the only child. There was no one to whom she could go. Herrimon glared at her whenever he passed. A black month of the year was coming, when there would be a general laying off. She was pretty sure that her name was slated.

"I wish I could help you," Edith mourned every night. "Gee! It's tough to be poor. But believe me, I plant a dollar a week after t's, instead of letting it trickle. There's that last dress I bought for that dance. And then Alf didn't take me. I could have had that $8. Say, Hilda, Alf wants to meet you. He likes your style. I told him you had gray-blue eyes and black hair. And he got a glimpse of you one night as you passed us on the street.

"WHEN DID YOU GET BACK IN TOWN?"

When he comes back will you go to a show with him and Fred and me?"

Hilda was sitting wearily in the remshackle rocker. At Edith's question she began to cry. "Go to a theatre?" she sobbed. "In a forty-nine-cent shirt waist and a patched black skirt? I wish I was dead! And I'll never get that $18!"

Edith's eyes blurred in sympathy. "I wish—". There was a knock at the door and she said: "Come in."

Hilda did not look up. She supposed that it was the girl who had the next room. She was a pretty gay little thing, whose excellent salary as stenographer in a bank made their own seem less.

"Alf!" cried Edith gayly. "When did you get back in town? And how's the folks out in Nebraska?"

"Fine," he answered.

Hilda was furious. With her red eyes and mussed hair! She acknowledged the introduction without raising her eyes.

Alf delivered a cake and some jelly that Edith's aunt had sent her. And then he said abruptly: "I got hold of something the night I left here that I don't know how to get rid of. So I came around to see if you could tell me. I was in an awful rush, and my last collar button broke."

Hilda looked up and recognized him. "Then it was you!" she cried.

"And it was you!" he replied in turn. He pulled out the pearl pin with a laugh. "I never looked at the package till I was on the train. Just shoved it into my pocket. And then, to save my life, I couldn't remember what store I had been in. You know all those department stores in a row look alike to a fellow. I've been to two this afternoon and no one seemed to remember. And I felt like an idiot going around trying to find the owner."

"What luck!" cried Edith. "Now, Hilda, you can throw it at Herrimon. Old beast! Anyway, it never cost the store $18."

"Was there trouble?" Alf asked gravely.

"Trouble!" And Edith volubly told him.

But Hilda didn't take the pin back. Alf insisted upon paying for it. He said he wanted to keep it. And three months later he had persuaded her to accept it along with a ring.

LITTLE STORIES FOR BED TIME

By Thornton W. Burgess

(Copyright, 1913, by J. G. Lloyd.)

All the time Sammy Jay was sulking in the thick hemlock tree in the Green Forest and working himself into a great rage at the thought that he should be blamed for something which he hadn't done, Chatterer the Red Squirrel was chuckling to himself in a hollow chestnut tree not far away. It was a wicked chuckle, that chuckle of Chatterer. You see he was the real thief. It was he who had found the home of Drummer the Woodpecker and from it twice stolen a beautiful white egg. Then as if that were not bad enough he had told a wrong story. He had told Drummer that the thief was Sammy Jay.

Now an untruth is bad enough itself, but one untruth usually leads to another and sometimes to deeds that are even worse. It was so with Chatterer. He wasn't satisfied with telling Drummer that Sammy Jay was the thief. No, sir, he wasn't satisfied with that. As soon as he saw that Drummer believed him he began to plan how he could steal again without being found out and put the blame on Sammy Jay. He knew where Sammy Jay lived and he hurried over there when he knew that Sammy was somewhere else. Just as he had hoped, he found a blue and white feather on the ground and with this he scamped home as fast as he could go.

The next morning Chatterer was hiding in the old orchard bright and early. He waited until Mr. and Mrs. Drummer left their home for a few minutes while they got their breakfast. Then, looking this way and that way to make sure that no one saw him, Chatterer whisked into the hollow which was the home of Mr. and Mrs. Drummer, and in a flash was out again with the beautiful white egg which he found there. And what do you think he had left behind him? Why, that blue feather of Sammy Jay's which he had found the day before. Of course when Drummer the Woodpecker came back he saw that feather right away, and of course he was sure then that Sammy Jay was the thief. Just as Chatterer had said. It was then that Drummer had led all the birds of the old orchard in driving Sammy Jay out.

Those stolen eggs had tasted so good to Chatterer that he made up his mind that he must have some more. He felt sure that after being robbed twice Drummer would keep a very close watch, so he must think of some plan to get Drummer and Mrs. Drummer away from their home at the same time. As he sat chuckling wickedly over the trouble he had made for Sammy Jay a new idea came to him. He would send a message to Drummer early the next morning saying that Sammy Jay was in another part of the old orchard and that he was boasting that he wasn't afraid of Drummer the Woodpecker.

"That will start Drumer off in a hurry and I wouldn't be surprised if

MR. AND MRS. DRUMMER LEAVING THEIR HOME.

Mrs. Drummer went, too," thought Chatterer.

So the very next morning Chatterer sent word to Jenny Wren that Sammy Jay was over in the far corner of the old orchard boasting of what he was going to do to Drummer the Woodpecker. Of course Drummer started off in hot haste.

Now it just happened that Sammy Jay did pass through that part of the old orchard at that very time. He was minding his own business when who should come after him shrieking "Thief! Thief!" but Drummer the Woodpecker, and immediately all the other birds in the orchard joined him.

Of course Sammy yelled back at them. No sooner did Mrs. Drummer hear his voice than she left her home unguarded to join in the chase of Sammy Jay. This was Chatterer's chance, and once more he breakfasted on a newly laid egg, while Sammy Jay was being driven back to the Green Forest in disgrace.

Eat This Food During Summer

Be careful what you eat during hot weather. What you need is food that nourishes but does not heat the body.

Faust Spaghetti fits right into that class. It is a high gluten food—a bone, muscle and flesh former—but contains practically no fat, therefore cannot heat the body.

FAUST SPAGHETTI

makes a savory, appetizing dish. It can be served in a great many ways that appeal to the palate. It is easily prepared—it makes a nutritious, non-heating meal during the summer. Write for free recipe book, "Spaghetti and Its Uses." Faust Spaghetti put up in air-tight, moisture-proof packages.

Stores Used to Think August A Dull Month!

Now they sell more furniture and other household goods in August than any month of the year!

Every merchant knew that furniture could be bought at lower prices for August selling because it is bought in dull times.

But they didn't think it could be sold until one of their number showed them that advertising would do the trick.

Now August Furniture Sales are a national institution.

If you need furniture or furnishings we especially urge you to read the advertisements now appearing in The Journal. It is the time to buy---at a profit to yourself.

Read what all the merchants have to offer in The Journal during this month.

It will pay you in real dollars and cents just as it is paying your neighbors.

COVERS DIXIE LIKE THE DEW

A JUNE GRADUATE

MISS EDDIE LEE TERRELL,
The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Terrell, and an attractive member of the 1913 class of the Girls' High school.

What Anne Rittenhouse Says

The August sales of white underwear should be taken advantage of by every woman who has the chance within her grasp. The changes have been drastic in this department of women's apparel and it has caused much speculation and discomfort.

It was all very well to insist that if one had full and gathered underwear one would continue to wear it no matter what the fashion, but one has found that such obstinacy worked ill in the long run.

The entire civilized world has come over to narrow clothes; every woman is not pronounced in her adoption who make any pretence of following modern fashions, wear skirts within two yards of the old width.

Under such skirts a full gathered petticoat is not only a waste of material, but it throws the outer skirt out of shape, which is surely not an economy in itself. The full corset covers of other days will not go under the kind of blouses we wear, and a knitted underskirt shows through the transparent materials which makes our homes.

It was all very well to stand out against these definite changes in underwear when the changes in outer wear were not established; the wise woman and the rich woman made lingerie to suit her new clothes, but other women would not do it and insisted that the new fashions in gowns would not last, so they continued to buy the old kind of underwear.

Under Garments Are Slim

There is no doubt that we must wear attenuated lingerie if we are to look well in any of the modern garments. If any woman has a large amount of the old-fashioned kind she must either reshape it or put it up for other days. Both methods are extravagant unless one has idle time and wants to fill it. This refers to recutting the garments; the former method is extravagant because the material is apt to fall apart at the first washing after it has been put up for years.

So if one takes advantage of the August sales one is sure to save money and to have lingerie that will be suitable for next winter's clothes. There is not a sign in the heavens or on the earth beneath that full clothes are to be in fashion in October. They may be. No prophet or son of a prophet can foretell anything about clothes now. But it is reasonably sure that we will continue to be slim and narrow until January, if not longer.

Fewer Garments Needed.

Time was when a woman had to spend twice as much money as now because she wore twice as many garments. Today she wants but few, but those few must be rightly made. Ornamentation is secondary; the primary thing is to have them fit the figure and the clothes worn outside of them.

The manufacturers of underwear waited before changing the cut, but now we have placed before us a large variety and assortment of garments that suit every figure and do not make a bulge beneath the slim transparent gown of the day.

If one can afford the use of Italian silk one will find it an admirable investment. Those who wear union suits in the cold weather will find that the heavy quality of silk gives all the warmth they need and wears for ever and a day.

The same is true of the silk knickerbockers which are worn outside of the corset as a substitute for a petticoat under a linen gown.

It is interesting that in this day of narrow silhouettes and the most clinging and thinnest of underwear, the drapery about the hips should be getting bigger and bigger. The stiff, outstanding tunic which makes the hips look twice their real size is a feature of almost all the new frocks. But, of course, this sort of hip drapery would be impossible over any but the most attenuated underwear.

COTTON MARKET STEADY; PRICES SLIGHTLY LOWER

Market in New York Closed 3 to 6 Points Down From Previous Close

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—Private reports of rains at points in Oklahoma and southwest Texas were not entirely confirmed this morning. Impression prevailed that the rains would be in early cotton market. Liverpool had received these reports and cables were lower than there started at an advance of 1 point on August but generally 1 to 4 points lower.

Some private rain reports were out some cotton but the offerings were absorbed by realizing of recent sellers. Some of the rains were for generally fair weather in the week ahead. The market was dull and steady at first, with realizing by recent sellers proved sufficient to hold prices steady at a point or two over yesterday's closing figures pending further weather reports from the southwest.

Estimated receipts today, 4,000 bales.

Detailed weather reports over Texas and Oklahoma showed only light scattering rains, precipitation and continued high temperatures, the market selling about 3 to 4 points net higher the early part ruled barely steady under realizing.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

(By Associated Press.)

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 13.—Cotton futures opened steady at a decline of 2 to 4 points on poor cables. The weather map showed a few light rains in the western cotton belt but they were not general enough to relieve the local selling. The market acted as if the small decline yesterday had fully discounted the moderate reported in Texas. After the call prices stood 3 to 4 points down, but sheets who waited that profits put the market up on themselves. At the end of the first half hour of business prices were 2 to 4 points over yesterday's close.

The market was dull throughout the morning session and prices were fairly well maintained in the face of private reports of rain at scattered points in Texas but the general talking quotations of shorts. The ring found it difficult to meet the demand, even though there was next to no demand for long account. The detailed weather reports noted rain at only nine stations last of sixty-eight in the state of Texas and in Oklahoma, which further steadied the market. The advance of eight points in October in new was not widened and at noon prices were at a loss of 1 point.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS

Miller and Co.: Unless the drouth situation in the southwest is relieved, we expect no activity at present.

Logan & Bryan: We do not think general conditions warrant any marked upturn at this time and in the event of good soaking rains in the southwest, a lower range of values will undoubtedly result.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Aug. 13.—The map shows another general precipitation in the eastern part of Texas, although light so far. Generally fair and hot in the rest of Texas and Oklahoma overnight, partly cloudy to fair in the rest of the belt. Scattered showers in Tennessee in the extreme gulf and Atlantic coast districts. Indications are for further precipitation over the eastern portion of the southern and eastern part of Texas.

Liverpool spots in fairly active demand at one time as much as 4 lower than due. Spots 1 higher; sales 7,000. The last report to us from Liverpool is that the trade is of a quiet continue bearish, chiefly on account of the bad trade outlook. Spot demand manufacturers are complaining bitterly and understand similar conditions exist on the continent, so that even with a moderate crop a bail movement appears difficult."

This accounts for the poor response to reports of crop deterioration from Texas and Oklahoma and the slow business in forward shipments.

Trading here is quiet this morning with the market dull but steady around last night's closing figures. We look for a steady run of cotton receipts, in view of the reports of active ginning in Texas and the southwest generally. This is generally accounted for by the slow export demand and the unfavorable news from Liverpool is in line with it.

NEW YORK COTTON LETTER.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—The market sold off on unofficial reports of rain in the western belt, and these were given as the cause for the decline in Liverpool. The map showed little or no rain and the detailed weather report posted at 8 o'clock gave temperatures and rainfall for yesterday was disappointing to the bears. Private reports of rain at scattered points in Oklahoma showing temperatures from 100 to 106 with points in Texas reporting high temperatures from 100 to 104 with much less rainfall than had been expected from the private reports that were received late yesterday afternoon. The market has been very dull and dead, though there was apparently some cotton wanted on all easy spots. Some of the prominent interests who have been identified with the bull side of late, were put down on the early seller, it is sparely a weather market the week depends on what may happen during the next two or three days of August.

MEMPHIS & TURNER'S CROP REPORT.

MEMPHIS, Aug. 13.—Following is the condition report of J. R. Turner shown following condition on August 1, with comparisons to government's figures on July 25:

North Carolina, 83, versus 77; South Carolina, 82 versus 76; Alabama, 80 versus 70; Mississippi, 78 versus 70; Tennessee 87 versus 90; Arkansas 86 versus 87; Louisiana 78 versus 70; Oklahoma 72 versus 51; Texas 74 versus 81; United States 81 versus 77. Taking condition as 100 basis to compare with the government July 25: The status of the crop is now just the reverse of that of the early season in that highest conditions are shown in the eastern and Atlantic states, which fact is due to exceptionally favorable showers and severe drouth in Texas and Oklahoma, operating to advance the one and pull down the other. It is seldom that cotton maintains at this date the important growth and vigorous life that is characteristic of the plant in Georgia and the Carolinas.

INTERESTING NEWS AND GOSSIP OF THE MARKETS

Weather Reports, Crop Advices, Expert Opinions and Newspaper Comment

COTTON GOSSIP

Hilton Democrat says: Were the cotton market freed from the menace of hostile legislation it would probably do better now that crop damage reports are coming in from the west in most numbers. But as matters stand, the report of rains over a large area in Texas and Oklahoma and a temperature excess of 1-2 degree over July normal, the people address to their clothes are now quoted at 5¾ cents, or ¾ of a cent below the quotations at this time last year, which is equal to about 2½ cents a pound on raw cotton. Prices are relatively 40 cents per bale lower than they were at this time last year. Meanwhile, trade situation conditions are not encouraging. The weather forecast was for fair weather in the west and south, but predicted showers in the Atlantic coast states, the latter probably resulting by recent sellers proved sufficient to hold prices steady at a point or two over yesterday's closing figures pending further weather reports from the southwest.

Estimated receipts today, 4,000 bales.

Detailed weather reports over Texas and Oklahoma showed only light scattering rains, precipitation and continued high temperatures, the market selling about 3 to 4 points net higher the early part ruled barely steady under realizing.

GREAT THRONG MAKE MERRY AT CONVENTION BARBECUE

Dixie Dealers Gathered Here for Last Week of Meeting are Tendered Big Feast on Wednesday Afternoon, at Ponce de Leon Spring—Chairman Little and His Committee Prove Royal Hosts and Serve Viands Fit for Kings

The delegates to the Southern Merchants' convention gathere this afternoon at 1 o'clock in a vast throng at Ponce de Leon springs for the grand barbecue of the closing week of the 1913 meeting.

It was the main entertainment feature of the convention and the delegates from all parts of the southeast who had been looking forward to it with much pleasure began to arrive early Monday and their numbers was augmented throughout Tuesday and Wednesday morning until a crowd worthy of the big event was on hand when the feast began.

The visitors boarded a string of cars at noon at the Equitable building and were soon at the grounds, where they were received by Chairman J. R. Little and other members of the barbecue committee.

Everything was in readiness and the big feast started on time. On the long pits were smoking the savory rounds of lamb and pig and the Brunswick stew, cooked by experts, was ready to be served.

With the assistance of all the Atlantians present who constituted themselves collectively and individually an entertainment committee, the viands were served, the visitors fell to, and the feast was enjoyed to it utmost.

The barbecue committee paid a final visit to the grounds Tuesday afternoon, the space to be occupied by the visitors was roped off, and at 6 o'clock Tuesday afternoon the cooking of the meats for the grand spread was begun.

With respect to the crowd present and the delightful way the affair was handled, it proved to be one of the greatest barbecues ever held in Atlanta.

The barbecue committee is composed of the following: J. R. Little, chairman; R. K. Rambo, W. O. Stamps, W. L. Percy, E. M. Hudson, A. M. Wilkins and C. F. Barnwell.

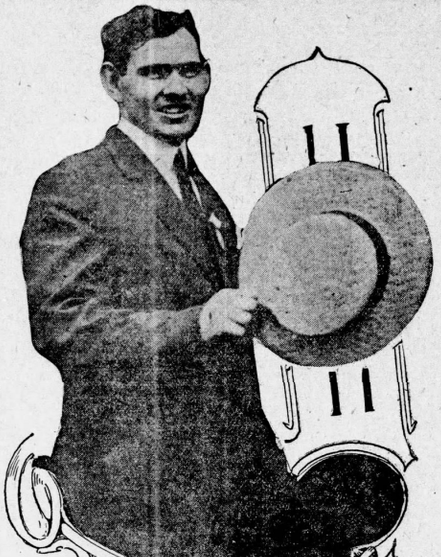
A PLEASED VISITOR AT CONVENTION



A. J. Dial, of the firm of R. E. Mason, Walnut Grove, Ga., who was the first registered arrival this week for the convention festivities.

TUESDAY WAS STRICTLY BUSINESS WITH VISITORS

Tuesday was strictly a day of business with the merchants visiting Atlanta.

In anticipation of the big barbecue for which they all wanted plenty of time today the visitors who had buying to do, and most of them did, spent most of yesterday in the show rooms of the jobbing houses.

In the afternoon a number of the merchants made a round of calls on the manufacturing plants to see just where and how Atlanta made goods are turned out. They learned many interesting things of manufacturing processes and products that most Atlantians, within a few minutes' walk or ride of the factories the year around know little about.

The day was made a busy one with the jobbers because of many of the visitors arriving during Monday postponing their buying to make an early start at it Tuesday morning, while the arrivals of Tuesday got down to business at once for the reason mentioned—to be free Wednesday with plenty of time for the barbecue.

Salesmen who have spent other days visiting the hotels to find the merchants who are here from their territories spent yesterday at their company's headquarters taking care of the merchants who called on them.

INCOMING MERCHANTS CROWD HEADQUARTERS

Sixty Register Within a Half Hour After Books Are Opened Wednesday

Sixty merchants had registered within half an hour of today's opening of the books at the Southern Merchants' convention registration headquarters in the Piedmont hotel lobby.

This indication that the day's registration will likely show the largest number of arrivals of any day so far was serengthened by the arrival at 10 o'clock of a hundred merchants from Madison, Conyers, Lithonia, Stone Mountain, Covington and other towns along the Georgia road.

Seventy-five came in on the morning train from Maysville, nearly every town en route contributing several to the crowd.

The incoming merchants completely filled the lobby of the Piedmont hotel, and the registrars spent the busiest period which they have had during the two weeks of the convention.

"VISIT INCREASES OUR CONFIDENCE IN JOBBERS"

A. M. Hester, of Tallapoosa, Ga., who attended the first week of the convention, is here again for the barbecue.

Mr. Hester is much impressed with the value of the Southern Merchants' convention to the wholesale interests of Atlanta in bringing the retailers in closer touch with them.

"It gives us added confidence in the Atlanta market," he says, "to come here and meet personally the men at the head of the houses from which we are buying our stocks, to see their places of business and the goods they have, and to talk over our mutual problems.

"Atlanta is doing itself a great deal of good by these conventions. This is the first one I have attended, and I am sorry I missed the others."

CONVENTION ECHOES

Doings and Sayings of the Great Gathering

Chris Irby and J. L. Smith, of the A. M. Robinson Co. sales staff, are reported to be getting around 500 on house sales and declare they are going to keep it up on the road during the next month.

W. L. Allen, of Allen & Allen, Shellman, Ga., is noted as a great booster for his home town, but next to that he is a booster of Atlanta as the place for the merchant to buy. Speaking of his home place he says they are making a thousand bales of cotton to every hundred people and was the second town in the state to receive 1913 cotton for the market.

The largest order for this season at the Silvey & Dougherty Hat Co. was taken Monday by G. M. Tanner, of their road force. Big Hickory Handle Roan was going after the selling honors there last week, but the north Georgia man is getting a running start on him this week.

Sales to the visiting merchants are being made at even a brisker pace at the Ward-Truitt company this week than last, according to a statement from Mr. Ward. And they were mighty busy there last week.

G. C. Green, from Smyrna, is almost a daily visitor in Atlanta these two weeks. It certainly is convenient for a merchant to be within electric car distance of Atlanta during the festivities.

D. P. McDaniel, of the Ward-Truitt company, led off for the week in fine shape at his house by selling a $2,000 bill of goods for a starter. C. V. Nalley had several customers from his territory, whose purchases put he and Mr. McDaniel neck and neck for sales honors.

W. H. Marchman, from Greensboro, Ga., was one of the buyers at the Silvey & Dougherty Hat Co. yesterday.

One of the visitors who added much to the jollity of the occasion at the barbecue tomorrow is H. E. Futrael, from Soperton, Ga. He was all buzzes Monday in buying his fall line from Jim Mates at the Brown, Perryman & Greene Co., but he is right there in the business of having a big time.

U. S. Nichols, from Culberson, N. C., was one of the merchants buying at Gramling-Spalding company Monday. As far as buying is concerned his initials mean "us" and not United States. He thinks highly of the Atlanta market.

Mack Hirshberg is one of the traveling men that is missing from this year's convention. He is at present way down in Florida chasing the elusive order. He has been on that territory for only two months, but writes that he likes it immensely.

J. A. Lester, from Lineville, Ala., is not one of your one-day convention visitors. This Alabama delegate is here for a week and says he is enjoying every minute of it. He will return home just after the barbecue. He spent most of yesterday at Gramling-Spalding company buying fall stock.

George Ferguson, well known merchant of Rockmart, Ga., who has been ill under treatment in Atlanta for several weeks, is much improved. He is up and out cailing on some of his friends among the jobbing houses today and expects to be at the barbecue tomorrow.

C. E. Nicholson, from Statham, Ga., was one of the merchants who put in a busy day Monday buying goods. wants to have all his business transactions out of the way by barbecue time tomorrow.

C. F. Holberg, of Senoia, Ga., is one merchant who found attending the convention very convenient. He was already here as a legislator and is dividing his time between lawmaking and the entertainments provided the delegates.

J. W. Williams is now taking his turn as representative from the Hardeman-Little company, of Commerce, Ga. He is not one of your new comers, having been here last week and returned Sunday.

John T. McCollum and A. L. Mathews, from Fayetteville, Ga., were visitors at the Ragan-Malone company, morning.

F. W. Dollar, from Coffee Springs, Ga., was taking no chances on being late to the barbecue today. He made an engagement with J. F. Jenkins, Brown, Perryman & Greene Co. salesman, for 7 a. m. to buy his fall stock of hats.

One of the prominent south Georgia merchants here for several days is A. C. Duke, from Sylvester, Ga.

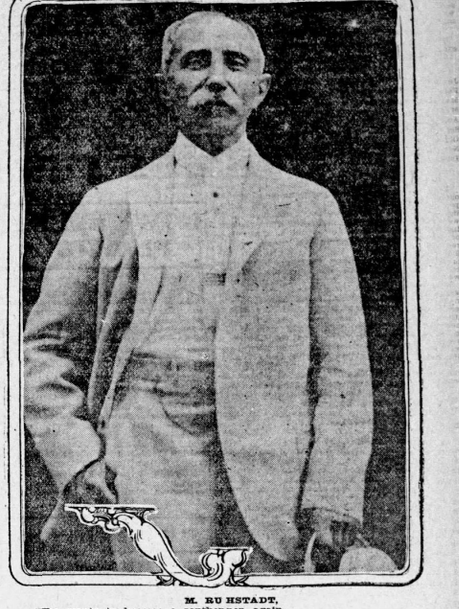
L. P. Hannon, of Cartersville, Ga., is one o fthe successful merchants who believes in buying in small lots and frequently. He has made the plan pay.

One of the women merchants here during the convention period is Mrs. A. M. Hargriett, from Willacoochee, Ga. She is spending the entire two weeks in Atlanta.

R. L. Webb, merchant from Damascus, Ga., is a brother of F. W. Webb, the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt Co. traveling man. He had planned going home Tuesday but decided to stay over for the barbecue.

At the Orr Shoe company it is reported that the first two days of this week were the liveliest yet. Practically all the salesmen are in and all busy greeting merchants from their territories.

NOT A SOUTHERN MERCHANT, WAS ONCE, NOW WANTS TO BE AGAIN



M. RUHSTADT,
Who wants to become a souther ner again.

Interesting Visitor From Gary, Ind., Pays Call at Convention Headquarters — Sees Merchants Here Having Such a Good Time, He Wants to Join Them

He was an interesting visitor at convention headquarters Monday morning. He is not a southern merchant though he used to be one and wants to be one again. And from the way the fame of Atlanta and Atlanta's wholesale houses has gone abroad in the land, it is not strange that he should come here when looking for a place to start in the mercantile business again in the south.

M. Ruhsadt is his name and he comes from Gray, Ind. With his family he is on his way to Palm Beach, Fla., but passing through Atlanta he could not refrain from stopping over for a few days and viewing the situation with reference to locating here and conducting a retail dry goods business which there with the determination of returning was his line at Gray before he sold out ing south.

Mr. Ruhstadt was a merchant at Columbus, Miss., about twenty years ago. He removed from that place to the north but has never been contented away from Dixie. He was given a warm welcome by the registrars and visitors at convention headquarters and was later taken to the chamber of commerce where he was given information about Atlanta and about the line of business which he contemplates entering here.

He expressed himself as delighted with the stir and bustle which he saw here and was enthusiastic over the enterprising spirit of the jobbers here which had resulted in the great meeting of the southern merchants now in progress.

Charley White Is Confident--Whitney Sure He'll Be There

SPEED AND SCIENCE; WHITE NOW FAVORITE

Many Believe Chicago Boy Will Put Whitney to Sleep but Frank Is Confident He Will Be Right on the Job When Last Bell Is Sounded

Everything is ready but the shaking of hands, and the sprinkling of the squared ring with resin, the gong is oiled, and the stretcher has been deposited outside for the use of the unsuccessful contestant in Atlanta's best ring contest.

This bout between White and Whitney should be the best for several reasons, one is that both of these boys like to make a hit with the Atlanta audience, and White is trying to out Whitney from his place in the popularity of the Atlanta fans. The second reason is that both of these boys know as much about the game as any fighter who has entered the ring in this place. In other words, we have with us two clever boxers, which makes a much better fight than a boxer and a slugger.

Whitney is aggressive, keen and a great defensive fighter. White on the other hand, is slow to rush, but quick as a flash with his punches. He is about the coolest proposition that ever entered a local ring.

The complete card is as follows:

KID YOUNG VS. CHARLIE LEE.

This fight has been handled back and forth between the fight fans of the city ever since Young lost to Lee on a foul at their last meeting. This may turn out to be a grudge fight, and it may turn out to be a good, cool attempt on the part of each of these boys to demonstrate that he is the best man. Lee to prove that he deserved to win last time, and Young to wipe out the drubbing which was handed to him when he fouled Lee.

MIKE SAUL AND TERRY NELSON.

Eddie Hanlon, the "Smithy" who was to fight Saul, and who rapped on Terry Nelson at their last meeting has received a mule kick, a genuine mule kick, not the kind handed out by the champs, and has blood poison, hence the tough little Greek, Terry Nelson, will be pitted against Mike Saul in the windup.

At the auditorium remember, 8:30 sharp.

Tickets are now on sale at Shepherds, prices $1, $1.50 and $2. The performance will open with a four-round bout between Kid Payne and Battling O'Leary.

Newnan Bunch Makes Money

NEWNAN, Ga., Aug. 13.—With the Georgia-Alabama league coming to a close Saturday, the Newnan Baseball association passes one of the most successful years since the days that Nap Rucker pitched ball on the local diamond. A neat surplus will be carried over on the books of the association, and a nice dividend will be paid the stockholders of the association.

The association has made money from the start of the season, as Newnan has led the league in attendance from the start.

Gadsden will probably win the pennant of the Georgia-Alabama league, with Newnan second and Anniston third. Gadsden and Anniston will probably not be in the league next season, and it is rumored that Griffin and Rome will buy the franchise of these clubs, and two additional cities will join the league, thus making eight instead of six.

Lovett, Hawkins, Howell, Craven, Robinson and Hanson will go to higher leagues next season. Hawkins and Lovett have led the league in pitching.

Batting Figures

Harry Holland has broken into the .300 circle and is second on the Crackers' slugging list, led on by Welchonce. His hitting has featured the road trip, and Tuesday's game found him hitting around 1.000 per cent. Three Crackers are now hitting better than .300.

ACCIDENT TO MORTY GRAVES; TIME WAS NOT UP TO MARK

Morty Graves, whose clever and daring riding has thrilled the spectators at the 'Drome in almost every race, may never be seen in action on a motorcycle again, certainly not for some time to come. Graves suffered a severe accident at the track Tuesday night, and as a result his right eye is badly lacerated and there is a possibility that he may lose it.

The accident happened just after Graves had won the first heat in the three-cornered race. He was priming his boat for the next race, when a pedal flew off and caught him in the right eye. Every attention is being given him in hopes of saving it.

Harry Swartz and George Lochner pulled down the honors of Tuesday night's racing, the former copping the finals in the Adair sweepstakes and his match with Harry Glenn, while the latter was winning the merchants' purse and the three-cornered match race.

The finish of the races was close, but the time was slower than usual and, somehow, they lacked the usual spice. Graves' injury undoubtedly put a damper over the rest of the events. Neither Richards nor McNeil pulled off their usual brilliant and daring spurts. Both were off Tuesday night, and the crowd missed them.

The five-mile final in the Forrest Adair sweepstakes was the prize event of the night. The riders were bunched all the way, and the finish saw them hardly a wheel apart, but the time was slow, and at best the race was a tame one. The best they could do the five miles in was 3:39 4-5, which is an average of a little over eighty-one miles an hour.

It is hoped that by next Friday Jock and Tex will have their boats in good running order and will be back on their jobs at Brill makers.

The results follow:

NO SCORE IN 20 INNINGS

JERSEY CITY, Aug. 13.—Jersey City and Toronto International league teams broke league records at West Side park here Tuesday when the teams battled twenty innings to a tie, neither team scoring.

Hearne, for Toronto, pitched the entire game. Thompson, for Jersey City, was relieved in the home team's half of the thirteenth inning to permit a pinch hitter to bat with the bases full. Brandon finished the game. There was only one fielding error. With one out in the thirteenth, Bues hit for three bases. Calhoun and Blair walked, filling the bases, but Hearne retired the next two batsmen.

Toronto played errorless ball and made eight hits off Thompson and Brandon, and Jersey City seven off Hearne.

HOW CLUBS PLAY TODAY

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 13.—Because of Thursday being an open date in the schedule for New Orleans and Memphis, the double-header scheduled for today was limited to one game. Harrell or Newton and Seabough were Manager Bernhard's selection, while Green or Stephenson and Yantis were to work for New Orleans. The weather was clear and warm.

MOBILE, Aug. 13.—Mobile and Montgomery will settle the question of leadership in the Southern league today at Monroe field, where a double-header is scheduled, the first game to be called at 2:15 o'clock. Hogg and Schmidt will work for Mobile in the first game against Case and Gribbens for the visitores. Either Berger or Cavet will pitch for Mobile in the second, with Schmidt receiving. Manning will probably pitch the second game for Montgomery, with Gribbens behind the bat.

WHITNEY GAVE UP TOOLS TO DON BOXING GLOVES

Forced to abandon his carpenter shop and travel with his invalid wife, Frank Whitney, known to Atlanta fandom as "the Fighting Carpenter," suddenly turned to the boxing game just because it is the kind which appeals to the traveler and it is easy to get matches. It was not because of his love for the game that he stuck to the squared circle, but it was a case of stick or starve, and Frank stuck.

While working in Cedar Rapids, Ia., Whitney was known as just an ordinary every-day little town carpenter. He could build fences, repair leaks in the roofs of houses and other such jobs and was a most popular youngester. During the first two years Frank ran his little carpenter shop business was good and in June, 1909, he was married. Shortly his wife became ill and he was forced to take her west, this causing him to give up his little shop.

After leaving his home town Whitney just had to have some kind of work to do. He pondered over it for a long time and finally picked out the boxing game. He did not switch to boxing because he knew anything about it but simply because he knew as much about it as any other form of work. He was strictly a novice at the game and right now he remembers his first fights as his hardest.

Whitney has now been boxing just a little over three years and in that time he has come fast. He has fought in every city of any consequence from San Francisco to Cleveland and Minnesota to New Orleans. And in each he is just as popular as here in Atlanta, where the fans swear by him, knowing that every time he enters a ring there is bound to be a scrap. In his short career Whitney has engaged in some seventy fights and has lost but four, and he has been in the circle with some mighty clever boys.

Whitney will never forget the carpenter trade. It was at this game he secured his start and right now he carries a union card in the carpenters' union. And when he is worn out as a ring general he will be right back in some carpenter shop at his old trade.

Whitney is to make an appearance before Atlanta fans at the auditorium Wednesday evening, when he boxes ten rounds with that clever Chicagoan, Charlie White. But from the way he handles the mitts you would never believe he had piloted a hammer most of his life.

Collegian Will Work in Final

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 13.—In their last appearance on the local ball field this season, and, in fact, their last appearance away from home, the Atlanta club closes the series with Birmingham today.

Coach Crackers have left the Barons smarting under two straight defeats so far, and consequently must bear the brunt of a flying attack in today's game in order to get away with it. Atlanta is no less anxious to make it three straights, as they are fighting for first place only three and a half games behind, and as they are only two games ahead of their opponents, the Barons.

In order to stop the Crackers, Molesworth will send Prough,his big hurler, against them. Prough has won nine straight games, and is pruned for another to add to his string, and if the Crackers succeed in breaking his string it will be beyond the power of the other teams which have faced him for the last five weeks.

To oppose Prough, Billy Smith will select one of his two ex-rival collegians, Voss or Thompson. Voss has just reported to his team from the Macon club of the South Atlantic league, and will be given a tryout one day this week, but it is probable that Smith will save him until the home ground is reached, working Thompson in the last road game of the season.

Big Boost for Batting Marks

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 13.—Hits and runs galore, three pitchers punctured and three big innings. That tells the tale of Atlanta's second victory over the Barons.

Hardgrove, Gregory and Evans were unable to keep the Crackers' total under 12 runs, while the Barons could only garner 3 from Elliott Dent's delivery.

Extra base hits when men were on featured the game. Triples and doubles seemed to be at the command of Smith's men at the proper time.

In the second inning Atlanta made enough runs to win the game. Holland opened with a single, and after Holtz popped out and Chapman drew a pass, Dent singled through first and Holland scored. Agler was hit and, with the bases full, Long was walked, forcing Chapman in. Welchonce's single scored two more and Long scored the fifth run on Smith's sacrifice fly.

In looking ahead to the 1914 season Elberfeld sees the same task facing him that has faced every pilot who ever steered the Lookouts—the acquisition of a real class A outfield. The garden has been the weak spot of the Lookouts offensively speaking ever since their entrance into the league.

The failure of this year's club may be attributed directly to the derth of hitting in the outfield. The local infield and battery departments are adequate in every way but the offensive weakness of the outfield gardners has squandered sensational hurling and brilliant support by the inner defense. The failure of Curt Elston to bolt the horsehide at a .300 clip was a fatal blow to the Elberfeldians.

To remove this outfield weakness Elberfeld is already preparing a long list of trades and figuring on a number of possible purchases and deals. Just what they are President Andrews announces is not to be given out, even confidentially, for some several weeks. It seems a pretty safe bet, however, that next year's outer garden will afford a number of new faces.

Although there has been no intimation of it from baseball headquarters, it is not impossible that Elberfeld himself might remain in the field. With Graff, Walsh and Flick the outright property of the club and playing great ball the Kid could easily be spared from the inner defense so as to bolster up the batting of the garden contingent.

CHANGES FOR JUST A DAY

The Gulls took another from Montgomery, thus overhauling them and tying for first place. The Atlanta team, by walking away from Birmingham pulled up within 4 1-2 games of the first clubs. The Southern race is still the prettiest, as Birmingham is only a short distance behind Atlanta.

The Giants took one after a hard fight. Al Demaree won again.

CHATTANOOGA CLUB BUILDING FOR HOT RACE NEXT SEASON

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Aug. 13.—A pennant in 1914? This is the cry that is enamating from local baseball headquarters. All hopes of a gonfalon this season have been given up and the only ambition of the Moogans now is to finish ahead of the Barons and Crackers or at least the latter.

Crackers to Return Home On Thursday

Road Trip to Date Has Been Fairly Successful—Work of the Hurlers Main Feature of Play

Back again Thursday, the Atlanta fans will welcome the Cracker bunch from their eleven-game road trip. So far ten of these eleven games have been played and six have gone to the crackers and four to the opposition. The best they can do is to win six and lose five, while a victory over Birmingham on Wednesday would bring them back with a record of 7-11, and within striking distance of the leading club.

The Crackers are here this time for a long stay. They will play at Ponce de Leon for the rest of the season, twenty-two scheduled games, and a few postponed games, before the schedule for the season of 1913 ends.

During this stay at home the Crackers are going to make a desperate effort to catch up the lead which Mobile and Montgomery have on them, and with the pitchers going at their present gait, and the acquisition of Holland to fill out the infield, and Calvo to take the right garden, the Crackers should present a line up which is airtight and fit to stand the strain for the spurt for the top.

This home stay opens on Thursday with a double bill played with the Lookouts, and closes on September 6 with a one-game series with these same Lookouts. During the stay all the teams of the league except Nashville will be encountered.

Here is the list of scheduled games:

August 14, 15, 16—Chattanooga.
August 18, 19, 20—Birmingham.
August 21, 22—Montgomery.
August 25, 26, 27, 28—Memphis.
August 29, 30—New Orleans.
September 1-3—New Orleans.
September 2, 3, 4, 5—Mobile.
September 6—Chattanooga.

THE SPORTLIGHT
BY GRANTLAND RICE

"Any ball player who takes off his cap to the cheers of a crowd is crazy," remarked a well-known manager recently. "The same crowd that cheers him today will be calling him a dog tomorrow and demanding his release. No ball player that ever lived can do enough to earn, or rather to get, the continued respect and applause of a set of fans."

THE CASE OF WAGNER.

To a very great extent this statement wanders down the way of truth. When a home audience can rise up and pan the hide off Hans Wagner in a batting slump there is little to be said for the average loyalty of the fan. For seventeen years Wagner had earned the wildest cheers of his home people through the most brilliantly consistent work ever known.

He had not only been a wonderful star, but an honor to his game in every way—one of the marvels of merit, skill and deportment that come but once along the highway in the history of a game.

Seventeen years pass and at last, although still fielding brilliantly, he comes upon his first extended slump at bat.

Do those who have cheered him through two decades remember that he is the only ballplayer alive who has batted above .300 for sixteen consecutive years? Not so as you might notice it. They only remembered that Wagner did not get a hit for three days in a big series, and, in place of the accustomed chering, this cry boomed across the field:

"Hey, take that big boob out and get some one who can hit."

"Say, Clarke, whoever told you that big Dutch stew was a ballplayer?"

"Oh, you big cheese; you for the old woman's home," and other highly sportsmanlike war cries to the same genial effect.

THE FICKLE FAN.

If Wagner hasn't done enough to earn at least an absence of the anvil chorus, what chance has any other ballplayer got before the fickleness of the fan?

A California visitor to Pittsburg, who had never seen Wagner play before, told us that when these jeers and taunts arrived, he felt for the first time murder in his heart, and that for the first time he was ashamed of the human race.

But that didn't help Wagner, and it is more than probable that when base hits in thick clusters begin to sing by the ears of Mathewson and Johnson, may of those now cheering will be there with the old "Take him out. Chase the cheese and give us some one who can pitch."

This charge against the fan flock isn't sweeping. There are those who are fair enough to remember yesterday's glory in connection with tomorrow's slump. But the others are sufficient in number to drive many a star into retirement with only bitter memories of the years that gave him fame and fortune.

ADVANCE PENNANTS.

When some one suggested to McGraw recently that he had the pennant sewed up, the Giant leader cut in with a quick rebuttal.

"I've been in this game too long," he said, "to figure any pennant sewed up. The only flag I was absolutely sure of winning was back in 1906, when we finished twenty-five games behind. I had a strong club—the strongest I ever had—but before I knew what had happened we had lost Mathewson, Donlin, Bresnahan and McGann, with McGinnity in poor shape, and others out of gear. I knew last year when we were sixteen games to the good that trouble was coming. And it took no expert to see around the first week of August that my club was again showing signs of the hard strain, and so was ready to start slipping."

THE ALBIONIC INVASION.

The arrival of Messrs. Vardon and Ray will set the last stage of 1913's international flareup.

In golf only has England been able to check the American assault, but with all the skill and ability of this great pair it isn't likely that two men can contend equally against a field of 200.

But this isn't going to interfere with golfing America's keen desire to see just how these eminent citizens of Britain are inclined to make certain shots and wield certain clubs. They have tradition back of them as well as the rest of it, and from next week on Scotia's enticing game will be up in a big boom through the September ensembles which stage both the amateur and the open championship.

Tuesday marks Matty's thirty-third birthday. He may not have in every detail quite as much stuff as he was master of thirteen years ago, but he knows a good bit better how to use what he has left. He will be quite a pitcher as long as he is able to push the ball from the mound up to the big mitt.

There are several brands of fame. Winning streaks started by Boehling and Demaree caused mild sensations. But Johnson cut in with eleven straight without producing a thrill. It was only his normal gait with the fuzz and frenzy detached.

McGraw is collecting all the ex-Reds in sight. Fromme, McLean and Grant are among those secured. John J. evidently remembers the old slogan set in verse: "Playing great ball, but not for Garry Herrman."

George Stallings believes by next year he will have a first division team. Any manager able to blast the Braves out of last place in one year can claim the pennant and get away with it as far as we are concerned.

"DUKE" FARRELL, FAMOUS OLD CATCHER, NOW BONIFACE AND LEADER IN MEN'S FASHIONS

There may be, and probably is, much discussion regarding the identity of the greatest ball player and the greatest pitcher, but there is no doubt about the greatest dresser baseball ever saw. Ask any old timer, and his answer will be, "Duke Farrell!"

Charley Farrell, great backstop, who coached the Boston Beanies' babe batterymen last spring and will probably be seen in the same role this year, spends the closed season for baseball managing his hotel at Marlboro, Mass.

"Duke" is a splendid looking man; a big, strapping fellow, always dressed in the height of fashion. And he knows "how to wear" clothes. He sets the fashion for all the live wires in Marlboro and the contingenet suburbs.

Farrell's baseball career covered eighteen years of playing. He debutted in 1888 and bowed himself out when 1905 drew to a close. His first engagement was with the Chicago-Colts, and before he tossed aside the big glove he hopped about considerable.

In 1890, when the Brotherhood was formed, Farrell cast his lot with the players. He was in Boston in 1891, Pittsburg in '92, Washington '93, New York '94 and '95, Washington again from '96 to '99, Brooklyn 1900 to '02, and then with Boston until 1905.

In 1899 and 1900 Farrell and Jim ("Deacon") McGuire caught Ned Hanlon's pennant-winning pitchers of the Brooklyn team. These were Jim Hughes, "Brick" Kennedy, Joe McGinnity and Kitson. In 1891, '97 and '98 Farrell hit well above .300.

When Jim Collins won the flag in 1903 and 1904 and took the world's championship from Pittsburg through Bill Dineen's masterly pitching in the deciding game, in 1903, "Duke" Farrell and Lou Criger did the catching.

Farrell was born at Oakdale, Mass., August 31, 1866. In the early days of his career he was one of the "mustache wearers," but when the lip decoration came to be considered insanitary, Farrell shed his, to grow it again when he quit the game.

Mike ("King") Kelly, that wonderful catcher, outfielder, infielder, in fact, wonderful all-round player and quick thinker is Farrell's choice as the greatest player the game produced.

There is but one "greatest pitcher, according to Farrell, and his name is Amos Rusie. Rusie had something more than speed, else the old catcher would not rate him as the daddy of them all.

PROFESSORS WANT SLANG

CHICAGO, Aug. 13.—Charles A. Comiskey, owner of the Chicago Americans, likes baseball reports best when they are written in plain English, while professors at the University at Chicago deplore the possibility of the elimination of slang from the accounts of games. These unexpected attitudes were learned today in a vote being taken by a local newspaper to determine just how the followers of the national pastime want the games described.

"I am in favor of clean, plain English story of a baseball game," said Comiskey. "What readers want to know is who won the game and how it was won. When these facts are covered up with a lot of useless words the reader is apt to grow tired."

"I think it would be pretty tame to report baseball in plain ordinary English," said Prof. Nathaniel Butler. "There is a species of humor on the sporting page which is enjoyable. We want the picturesque in the reports that the writer shows a defect when it is impossible for the layman to understand him."

Several professors at the university declared their preference for stories sprinkled with slang.

Hurled 21 Innings Of Shutout Ball

KEOKU, Ia., Aug. 13.—William Whittaker, pitcher for the Keokuk Central association team, Monday set what was believed here to be a world's record when he pitched twenty-one consecutive scoreless innings in a double-header between Keokuk and Waterloo teams.

Keokuk won both games 1 to 0, the second going twelve innings. But five hits were made off Whittaker's delivery.

Expert Data On the Use GOLF of Stiff and Whippy Shafts

Jerome D. Travers, present amateur champion, is a strong advocate of and believer in stiff shafts for all golf clubs. "Jerry" don't want any flinching or giving in the shaft that might deflect the face of his clubs from the way in which he desires to bring them to the ball.

In his book Travers puts particular emphasis on the stiff shaft theory. By stiff he does not mean thick and clumsy shafts, but steely rigid pieces of hickory that are capable of maintaining the head in one position in relation to the shaft throughout the stroke.

On the other hand, R. A. Gardner, who won the amateur championship in 1909, was a great believer in extremely whippy shafts, and was credited with being a very strong driver. I felt one of his clubs, and was amazed at the resemblance to a weight suspended by a string.

A friend of mine has a driver and brassey made with a flexible steel rod running from the wooden head up to the ordinary leather-covered grips. The heads seem very heavy at the end of the steel rods, but he gets very long balls. I imagine he has produced something closely akin to the famous dreadnaught drivers.

When suffering from the ailment of not being able to get the ball up from the ground with the brassey I have seen many players quickly recover by using very whippy shafts, which seem to get the ball up more quickly than stiff shafts.

If inclined to try the experiment take a broken bit of glass or a knife and scrape some old brassey. Do the scraping within the foot or eighteen inches above the lashing strengthening the head.

Of course, what Travers says about the advantage of stiff shafts making for accuracy is logically sound. Golf approaching the attainments of the expert is not to exact a test of skill to be left to the uncertainties of the way the head of a club chooses to come down to the ball if attached to the mere apology of a shaft.

Thin, whippy shafts have a very short life as compared to stiff, flinty ones. They rapidly lose their resiliency and life and become even more string-like than when they are new.

I always carry one whippy club for use where I am particularly anxious to get the ball up and safely over some hazard where to get in might cause the loss of many difficult strokes in heavy sand.

Uhlan After Record

Billings, of New York, champion trotter of the world, will appear at Goshen during race week, August 19 to 21, in an attempt to beat his world's record of 2:02 3-4 over the historic half mile track. It will be his only appearance in the east this season.

Palmetto Wins Game

PALMETTO, Ga., Aug. 13.—Palmetto Cotton mill team defeated the Gate City mill team here Saturday in a one-sided game. The features of the game were the pitching of Pagett for Palmetto, striking out thirteen of the Gate City boys; H. Brown on first, and E. Conger on third, also featured. Conger played in Wallace Smith style. Bonner also starred behind the bat for Palmetto.

Forget had the Gate City's guessing throughout the game. Collins for Gate City was batted out in the second inning and was relieved by Dillard, who pitched very good ball, only allowing two scores to come in. Palmetto plays at Gate City on August 16.

POULTRY, PIGEONS AND LIVE STOCK

A Commercial Poultry Plant In Georgia That Is Making Good

IT hardly looks possible that a person could accomplish what Mr. Reinhardt has in three years with so limited capital and experience as he has done. It shows his wonderful business ability, and it also thoroughly convinces me that men who have been successful in business ventures of different kinds can in a short time make a success and a large per cent of profit out of the poultry industry when they use the same business judgment in conducting the affairs as is given to other lines of business. The best part of this all is that with absolutely no experience whatever this has been accomplished in three years, and shows that common sense and good judgment applied to poultry keeping is the main thing.

Mr. Reinhardt has started right and will end right, and the demand being absolutely unlimited the business is here for the man who will go after it. He is getting at least 25 per cent more for his eggs now than he did two years ago. Another year will show a 10 to 15 per cent better price than it does at present, as he is in a position to take care of the fresh egg business at a time when there are but few men who can do so. In addition to the sales from fancy fowls and fancy eggs, which will amount to probably as much as the income from the commercial standpoint this venture cannot help but show to the people of this country what can be accomplished with poultry, and a business enterprise that will be a revelation to the many poultrymen of the south.

Anyone who is interested in poultry at all can gain much knowledge and information and tell there is a great future for them by visiting and inspecting the plant. It is one of probably one-half dozen large successful poultry plants in the south, but after visiting nearly all of them I am thoroughly convinced that this plant is on the best paying basis of any one I know of.

There are thousands of acres of land suited and adapted similar to this tract that Mr. Reinhardt has naturally adapted to poultry growing throughout the entire south, and when converted into this work as he has done the income from such lands can be made to show a larger per cent of profit-producing poultry than anything that can be placed on it. And poultry keeping and the immense amount of fertilizer secured from the fowls shows very plainly on the growing crops now where it has been applied. The entire premises are equal to most garden spots and if it were converted now into a farm crop of any kind such yields as have never been seen in that section would be produced from this land. The poultry manure that is produced and saved on this place is a big item itself, and with some additional land that he proposes to take in it will soon be made rich and more than enough food produced on this few acres to feed and care for the entire lot of fowls. It is surprising how many means how much can be produced on a few acres of land, and when it is converted into cash through poultry and fully as much left on the land as has been removed it cannot help but show a profitable line of work for many others to take up who will apply the same business judgment to it that Mr. Reinhardt has.

Long may this plant and its owner be in existence, and it is to be hoped that it will be an object lesson that many others will follow. In addition to making money for its owner it has practically put the little town of Colbert in a public way on the map, and it is known now far and near as the White Leghorn day-old chick town of Georgia, having a capacity of turning out three hundred White Leghorn chicks every day throughout the entire season. It has done wonders for this community.

Yours very truly,

POULTRY FEED

THE PROPER WAY TO FEED HENS TO PRODUCE EGGS IN THE FALL OF THE YEAR

If you want your hens to lay during the Fall and Winter, read what the RIVERSIDE POULTRY FARM has to say:

RIVERSIDE POULTRY FARM
STANDARD SINGLECOMB WHITE LEGHORNS.
Riverside, Ala., Oct. 31, 1912.

Mr. J. P. Gentry,
Memphis, Tenn.

Dear Sir:

Replying to your letter asking how we liked Aunt Patsy's Poultry Feed, we have this to say, and you can judge for yourself: You remember the day you were here we had just mated a pen of 50 pullets, and it was agreed that we should try your feed on these birds first. We have been feeding these pullets on Aunt Patsy's poultry Feed (dry mash) in a hopper or trough. Have also fed Aunt Patsy's scratch feed in a deep litter so as to make them scratch for exercise. Yesterday we gathered 31 eggs from this pen, and the day before that, 25 eggs, a record breaker with us so far as eggs are concerned, from pullets in the early fall.

Since feeding Aunt Patsy all of my birds are in a thrifty, healthy condition, and I am so pleased with results that I have ordered another lot of the feed.

With personal regards from the writer, we are,

Yours truly,
Riverside Poultry Farm.
E. D. Kimball, Mgr.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Washington Street Apartments Sold for $18,000, White-hall Lot Being Given as Part Payment—Peachtree Lease Transferred—Capitol Avenue, Cain Street and Piedmont Avenue Sales—Spring Street Work—Office Building Rumor

A few sales of average considerations were announced on Wednesday, and most agencies reported a better volume of inquiries.

There is no doubt about the fact that the government's offer of aid to southern banks is having a fine effect. It is pointed out that while this money must be used for crop moving purposes, still it leaves the banks free to use their other funds for ordinary business purposes, instead of having to make ordinary business wait until the crop moving season is over.

WASHINGTON STREET SALE.

The Burdett Realty company has sold for Mrs. A. A. Bowen to an out-of-town buyer Nos. 447 and 447 1-2 Washington street, a two-story brick apartment house on a lot 50x140, for $18,000.

Mrs. Bowen took as part payment a lot 50x100 on the east side of Whitehall street, 100 feet south of Humphries street, whose value was not named.

PEACHTREE LEASE TRANSFER.

W. J. Govan has transferred to Marion May the lease he held on No. 19 Peachtree street, opposite the Fourth National bank building. The lease embraces the two-story building, the upper floor now being occupied by Mr. May, and the lower one by Mr. Govan's cigar stand.

The lease has four and a half years yet to run.

CAPITOL AVENUE SALE.

Mr. May has bought from L. H. Joel the southeast corner of Capitol and Woodward avenues. The lot is 40x150, with a dwelling on it. The consideration was not named.

CAIN STREET SALE.

Crawford Maddox, of the Smith & Ewing agency, has sold for L. C. Durham to J. R. Smith No. 96 East Cain street for $6,000, or at the rate of $150 a front foot.

This property consists of two small dwellings on a lot 40x150. It is on the north side of the street, between Courtland street and Piedmont avenue.

PIEDMONT AVENUE SALE.

The Burdett Realty company has sold for the Brookwood Real Estate company to Samuel A. Wilson a lot 100x300 on the east side of Piedmont avenue, 1,500 feet south of Peachtree road, for $3,500, or $35 a front foot.

SPRING STREET WORK.

The county having agreed to grade the city school lot at Spring and Eighteenth streets, as well as the approaches to it, the city finance committee will be asked shortly to include in the January apportionment sheet the necessary money for the new school building.

The county will open 1,000 feet on the unextended part of Spring street, between Fourteenth and Peachtree. It will open Eighteenth street from West Peachtree to a point 300 feet west of Spring street, and Nineteenth street from West Peachtree street to Spring.

This will open up an unopened territory adjoining some of the most expensive residence development in Atlanta, and will open the way for the eventual extension of Spring street through to Peachtree at a point just north of the Rhodes property.

OFFICE BUILDING REPORTED.

It was reported Tuesday that Dr. E. L. Connally would improve the Brown & Allen corner of Whitehall and Alabama streets, which he owns, with a sixteen-story office building, to cost $750,000.

Dr. Connally at first characterized this report as "wild." He said that an architect had suggested plans for a building on the corner, and that the possibility of a large building being erected there was remote at this time. In fact, the doctor said he had no definite plans.

The present lease to Orkin has a year to run. There have been several rumors in the past about this corner, but none so far has materialized.

Saving and Investing

YOUR MONEY

BY JOHN M. OSKISON

Not so long ago Sir Rufus Isaacs was giving testimony before a British parliamentary committee concerning certain transactions in the stock of a wireless company. The reason for the inquiry was that Sir Rufus is a high official of the government, and the wireless company held a contract with the government. In the course of the inquiry, Lord R. Cecil asked, referring to a certain transaction:

"Surely that is speculation, not investment?" And the witness replied:

"Not at all; we change investments for clients almost every day."

"Your view is that, as long as you have a stock and sell, that is investment?" was the next question, and Sir Rufus affirmed that it would be "bona fide business." Lord R. Cecil went on:

"And that is not speculation to sell even if you intended to buy back at a lower price later on?" And the answer was, "That is so."

"And even," Lord R. Cecil went on, "if that is the purpose of the original sale?" And the answer: "Certainly. It is a sort of business done by the most conservative bankers in the city of London."

This frank admission by Sir Rufus Isaacs of the general character of much of the business done by the great bankers of London will seem rather surprising to the average man. The average man will agree with Lord R. Cecil when he said that he always thought investment to mean the buying of securities to obtain the interest or dividends paid on them.

Just when does the buyer and seller of stocks and bonds pass from the investor to the speculator class? For the average man, I believe that it is possible to make a fair answer to that question. I believe that the transition occurs the moment the buyer believes that his profit will come more from the rise in the price of the thing bought than from the interest or dividend return promised.

BLEASE SAYS WAIT TILL SLATON ASKS A FAVOR

Will Give Georgia Governor Taste of Own Medicine, He Declares

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

COLUMBIA, S. C., Aug. 13.—"As to Governor Slaton, I shall make no criticisms. When papers are sent to this office from his they will be given such consideration as he gave to those that went from this office to his.

"I believe in the good old doctrine, 'do unto others as you would have them do unto you.' But I have not yet reached that point in life where I find it advantageous to always follow the liberal doctrine of 'returning good for evil.'"

The above is from an interview given out by Governor Blease on Governor Slaton's refusal to grant his requisition for Julian Zachry. A copy of the interview was sent to Governor Slaton. The interview follows:

"The decision of the supreme court in Georgia in reversing Judge Hammond clearly and positively contains the opinion of Attorney General Peeples and myself that Zachry has violated the laws of this state, and if Judge Gary had gone just a little further in his order, which I think all good lawyers will agree with me that he should have done, and added, "and it is further ordered that this child shall not be carried beyond the jurisdiction of this court," Mrs. Zachry could now apply to this judge or another one and ask that the possession of the child be given to her, but Judge Gary, having neglected to make such provision, the child is now beyond the jurisdiction of the courts of this state, and Judge Gary himself, who passed this wonderful order, is as helpless as a babe to give her any relief.

"However, if he had a right top ass the order that he did, I hold that Zachry had no right to take the child out of South Carolina, and tat when he crossed the state border he became a kidnaper. The supreme court of Georgia says that Judge Hammond was wrong, therefore, the children properly belong in the possession of the mother, and Zachry most assuredly is guilty of kidnaping under the common law and under the statute law of this state, regardless of what Governor Slaton may be led to believe by his political allies, against the interest of a helpless and defenseless woman.

"As to the other charges, when Zachry took this child and deserted the mother and in other words, leaving them in Columbia, penniless and among strangers, he most assuredly violated the section of the law with which he is charged in reference to failing and neglecting to support his wife and children and, as to the charge of cruelty to the child, the decision of the supreme court of Georgia certainly confirms General Peeples and myself in that. Because, when Judge Hammond's decision was reversed it was not only cruelty to the child, but judicial outrage that it be torn from its mother's breast while it was sick and suffering and needed at that time the careful nursing and loving care of a mother. As to whether or not Zachry was guilty of violating any law of this state, that was a matter of fact for the jurisdiction of the grand jury, a matter of fact upon which Governor Slaton was caleld upon to pass.

"As I understand the law he only has to look 'to see if an offense was charged, if the papers were in proper form, if the requisition was not asked for the purpose of collecting a debt, or to enforce the civil judgment, and when he was satisfied of these questions it was clearly his duty to leave to the jury the questions of fact, for the ques-

INFLUENCE OF ENGLISH SWAYING THE JAPANESE?

Such Intimation at Washington—Mr. Wilson Pleased Over Mexic Outlook

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—Intimation is given by the unofficial remarks of some of the responsible members of the administration that the public attitude of Japan toward the mission of General Diaz, of Mexico, to Japan, is due to the coaching or influence of Great Britain.

It certainly is a fact that there is an air of joy about the White House over both British explanations of how that government came to recognize the fiuerta government of Mexico and over the declination of the Japanese emperor to receive General Diaz. The hint is given that other foreign governments are expected to assume a similar public attitude as soon as the Wilson Mexican policy is given out officially.

The statement is made at the White House that no foreign government has been granted official information of the proposed policy. But, the only interpretation to be placed on the attitude of the administration, as unofficially expressed, is that some of the foreign governments have received private information as to President Wilson's intentions toward Mexico. Otherwise it would be unlikely these governments would assume the public position they do.

President Wilson yesterday was open in his expressions of pleasure at the progress made by John Lind on his delicate errand. The president today apparently feels more hopeful than at any previous time of ultimate success in quieting Mexico, without the necessity of intervention and without being compelled to recognize any government founded on such crimes as that upon which the Huerta government rests.

If other governments presently follow the example of Great Britain and Japan, Huerta will be segregated from any show of outside sympathy. This, it is thought, will go far toward discouraging those who have been acting as his financial supporters for the hope of such returns in the way of concessions as he, once firmly established, could give them. It is clear from the attitude of the administration that it has been working along this line.

SENATE WILL PASS NEW APPROPRIATION BILLS

While the house was engaged in the throes of tax revision Tuesday afternoon, the Georgia senate sat and waited for bills. Only one measure was passed at the afternoon session, a house resolution authorizing the governor to borrow a half million dollars to make up the present deficit in the state treasury.

At 4 o'clock the senate adjourned, while committee meetings took up the rest of the afternoon. The general judiciary committee met and by the vote of 8 to 3 decided to recommend for passage a house bill introduced by Representative John Y. Smith, of Fulton, which does away with all prima facie evidence when the custody of a child under twelve years of age is to be awarded to father or mother.

Blood is Purified Quickly in Summer
Here is a Remedy that has Wonderful Action and Promotes Health.

Mingling with your food, arousing stomach action, absorbed immediately into your blood, the famous remedy known as S. S. S. has a wonderful action. Its main purpose is to stimulate cellular activity or that peculiar process which instantly changes the worn-out cells for the new red blood corpuscles.

The medicinal value of the components of S. S. S. is relatively just as vital to healthy blood as the nutriment obtained from grain, meat, fats, sugars or any other part of our daily food is to the natural reconstructive requirements of the tissues. Potash is one component of S. S. S. which serves the active purpose of stimulating the cellular tissue to a healthy and judicious selection of its own essential nutri*ment. Thus, in cases of skin disease* such as eczema, acne, herpes, tetter or psoriasis, first purify your blood with S. S. S. so it will enable the tissues to rebuild them to health strength and regain their normal health.

You can get S. S. S. at any drug store, but take no other so-called blood purifier.

S. S. S. is purely a botanical product, and you will make a great mistake to have some enthusiast palm off a mineral preparation that may do you irreparable injury.

S. S. S. is prepared by The Swift Specific Co., 191 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., and if you have any obstinate skin trouble, write to their Medical Department for free advices. It will be worth your while to do so.

RINGWORM SPREAD ALL OVER HAND
Itched So Scratched Till Bled, Screamed When Washed. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

R. F. D. No. 2, Box 67, Ellijay, Ga.—"My son's ringworm began on the back of his hand. A fiery red spot came about as large as a dime and it would itch so that he would scratch it till it bled. It began to spread till it went all over his hand. He would just scream when I went to wash it. The nail came off on the middle finger.

"I used ——— and it got worse all the time. The trouble lasted two or three months, then I sent and got some Cuticura Soap and Ointment and began to use them. I would wash his hand with the Cuticura Soap and dry it good and apply the Cuticura Ointment. Relief was found in two or three days and the ringworm was cured in two weeks after using Cuticura Soap and Ointment." (Signed) Jodie Parks, Jan. 4, 1913.

Not only are Cuticura Soap and Ointment most valuable in the treatment of eczemas and other distressing eruptions of skin and scalp, but they are also most effective in the treatment of pimples, blackheads, red, rough skins, itching, scaly scalps, dandruff, dry, thin and falling hair, chapped hands and shapeless nails. A single cake of Cuticura Soap (25c.) and box of Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are often sufficient when all else has failed. Sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

terested in them, were you not?" asked Mr. Arnold.

"Yes, we had a little three handed game."

Solicitor Dorsey asked: "You say that you went out to the chicken yard directly after dinner, do you?"

"I'm not positive," said the witness.

"Didn't you tell the coroner's jury that you stayed in the house and lay down directly after dinner?" asked the solicitor.

"Probably I did. I might have gone to the chicken yard later."

"Did Frank leave before you got up?"

"I don't know. I went to sleep. I wasn't paying any attention because I didn't know anything had happened."

"You knew when you testified before the coroner's jury, that something had happened, didn't you?" queried the solicitor with a smile. Mr. Arnold objected to the question and it was not answered, the witness leaving the stand.

MRS. SELIG ON STAND.

Mrs. Emil Selig, wife of the witness who had just finished testifying, was the next witness called to the stand. She testified that she is the mother of Mrs. Frank and the mother-in-law of the accused man. In answer to a question, she said that Mr. and Mrs. Frank had lived at her home for two years. She described the various rooms in the house, as Minola McKnight had described them. The mirror in the sideboard in the dining room is now as it was on April 26, and has never been moved in the whole five years that she has lived in the house, except for the purpose of sweeping the floor beneath it; and then it was put back in exactly the same position.

"Did you see Frank on the morning of Memorial day?" asked Mr. Arnold.

Mrs. Selig replied that she did not se him that morning, and that the first time she saw him was at lunch. She said that she and her daughter Mrs. Frank had prepared to go down town to the matinee that afternoon.

"What time did you have lunch that day Mrs. Selig?" asked Attorney Arnold.

"About 1:10 o'clock."

"When you sat down, had Mr. Frank and Mr. Selig come in yet?"

"I don't remember about Mr. Selig."

"Was Frank there?"

"No."

"What did he do when he came?"

"He sat down and ate."

Mrs. Selig testified that she and Mrs. Frank finished their lunch and left the table, leaving Frank and Mr. Selig still eating. The time then was about 1:30, she said.

"Who is your cook?"

"Minola McKnight."

"Where did you and Mrs. Frank go when you left the house?"

"We went to the corner and took a car down town."

SAW HIM ENTER STORE.

"When was the next time you saw Frank?"

"We saw him going into Jacobs' drug store that evening."

"Which Jacobs' store was it?"

"The one at Whitehall and Alabama street."

The witness continued testifying that she was on a street car passing the corner, and it was about 6:10 o'clock when she saw him. On the way home, she testified, she stopped at her sister's home for fifteen or twenty minutes and arrived at her own home about 6:30.

"Did you notice anything unusual about Frank?"

"No."

"Were there any scratches or wounds on him?"

"Not one."

Mrs. Selig said that they sat down to supper about 6:45 and finished about 7:15. She testified about the same as her husband had sworn, regarding the card party that evening at the Selig home. She said that Frank and his wife did not take any part in the game; that Frank never played the game they were playing that night.

"Did you notice Frank while you were playing?"

"I didn't notice him particularly."

"Where was he?"

"He was sitting in the hallway reading."

"Do you remember any incident regarding his reading?"

FRANK LAUGHED AT JOKE.

"Yes, he laughed once. He said he had read a joke about a baseball umpire."

Mrs. Selig testified that Frank went to bed about 10 o'clock and that Mrs Frank followed him after a short time. The card game continued until 12 o'clock, she said.

"Did you hear the telephone next morning?" asked Mr. Arnold.

"No."

"What time did you see Frank Sunday?"

"About 11 o'clock."

"Did you notice any blood spots, cuts or bruises about him that day?"

"No."

The cross-examination was conducted by Solicitor Dorsey.

"You swore at the coroner's inquest, didn't you, Mrs. Selig?"

"I answered yes."

"Whom did you tell the coroner's inquest you left at home that Saturday afternoon?"

"Mr. Frank, the cook and Mr. Selig"

"Didn't you say Mr. Frank and the cook?"

"No, I said Mr. Frank, the cook and Mr. Selig."

"When did you first see Mr. Frank that day?"

"About 1:20 o'clock."

"Aren't you mistaken?"

"No, I am not."

"You didn't see him that day, did you, at dinner?"

"Yes, I did."

"That sideboard is on rollers, isn't it?"

"Yes."

"It is moved a little every time you sweep, isn't it?"

"Yes, but it's put back in the same place every time."

"What time did Mr. Frank get home on Sunday morning?"

"About 11 o'clock."

"Did he tell you why he went to town?"

HE WAS SUMMONED.

"Yes, he said he was summoned to town."

"Why is it you told the coroner that he said nothing of the kind, and now you tell us he said he was summoned to town in connection with the crime?"

"I don't recall what I told the coroner's inquest."

"Did you ask Mr. Frank about the crime?"

"Yes."

"Did he seem unconcerned?"

"No."

"Didn't you tell the coroner's inquest that he did seem unconcerned?"

"No, I think I said that he naturally seemed concerned about it."

"Didn't you tell the coroner's inquest that you didn't attach any undue importance to it?"

"I don't remember."

COULDN'T REMEMBER.

"Did he say nothing as to the youth of the girl?"

"I don't remember."

"As to the brutality of the crime?"

"I don't remember."

"Did he advance any theory as to the crime?"

"I don't remember."

"Did he express any anxiety concerning the crime?"

"I don't remember."

"Didn't you tell the coroner's inquest that he did not express any anxiety as to the crime, and that he did not tell you anything as to his theory of the crime, or as to the brutality of the crime?"

"No, I don't think I did."

At this point there was a bitter dispute between the attorneys for the defense and the prosecution as to the correctness of Solicitor Dorsey's record of the testimony at the coroner's inquest. Attorney Rosser claimed that his record showed that Mrs. Selig testified that Frank naturally felt anxiety as to the crime. Solicitor Dorsey's record showed that in reply to this question Mrs. Selig said that Frank showed no anxiety. Solicitor Dorsey said that his record is the official record, being the one that was filed with the clerk of the superior court by the coroner after the inquest, in compliance with law. Attorney Rosser replied that the record filed with the clerk by the coroner was supposed to be a copy of the record furnished to him as attorney for the accused, and that therefore the two records should conform. After a long dispute, the issue finally disappeared without a decision either way.

"Did Mr Frank wear the same suit on Saturday, Sunday and Monday?"

"I don't remember."

"Didn't you tell the coroner's iquest that he did wear the same suit on those days?"

"Then if I did, I think I was mistaken."

"Didn't you swear positively, unequivocally and emphatically that he wore the same suit on Saturday, Sunday and Monday?"

"If I did I was mistaken."

"When did you first learn the name of the girl who had been murdered?"

"I don't remember."

"Frank didn't mention her name all day Sunday?"

"No."

"Then you first learned it from the newspapers, didn't you?"

"Yes, I think that's right."

"Come down," said Solicitor Dorsey.

"Wait," said Mr. Arnold.

"The facts in the case were harrowing, and you don't want to know about them; and you were ill besides, and Frank warned you the details?" asked Mr. Arnold.

Solicitor Dorsey objected, but not before the witness could answer yes.

"You had an operation the next day, did you not?"

"Yes, I was ill, and Mr. Frank had consideration enough to spare me."

"When asked at the coroner's inquest, didn't you tell them that Frank was concerned?"

"Yes, naturally, he was concerned and curious."

"That's all," said Mr. Arnold. The solicitor stopped the witness.

"How did you know that the facts were harrowing, if Frank didn't tell you anything about it?" he asked.

"Well, wasn't the fact that a dead girl had been found in the basement enough?"

"Didn't he tell you anything else?"

"No, he spared my feelings."

Court adjourned at 5:30 until 9 o'clock Wednesday morning.

CHINESE PRESIDENT EMPLOYS ASSASSINS

Jap Newspapers Say 100 Have Been Ordered to Kill Revolutionary Leaders

TOKIO, Japan, Aug. 13.—On hundred assassins have been sent to Japan to kill Dr. Sun Yat Sen, Huang Sing and other Chinese revolutionary fugitives by Provision President Yuan Shi Kai, of China, according to the Japanese newspapers today.

The Japanese government, in consequence of these reports, has arranged to give police protection to the leaders of the Chinese revolution who have sought asylum in Japan. It declares, however, that it will not permit Japan to be used as headquarters for Chinese plotters.

HOMER C. CARMACK TRIED FOR SLAYING AGED MAN

Defendant Is Charged With Murder for Sake of Money

COLUMBUS, Ga., Aug. 13.—In the court of law and equity of Lee county, Alabama, at Opelika, this week, Homer C. Carmack, well-known resident of Phenix City, is on trial charged with killing J. J. Folk, an aged merchant, who was quite feeble and unable to defend himself, the object, it is alleged, being to rob the cash drawer of the small grocery store.

The body of the old man was found on the morning of June 23 in his store, terribly mutilated, indicating a struggle. At the coroner's hearing, following the discovery and arrest of young Carmack, the fact was brought out that the old man begged piteously for his life, promising all that he had, but to no avail.

The payment of a number of bills by the defendant on the morning following the murder led to his arrest, and Carmack has never been able to explain just how he came in possession of the money. Feeling was high at the time of the killing, and the authorities hurried the prisoner off to Opelika for safe keeping, fearing violence on the part of friends of the dead man, who was a prominent Confederate veteran.

OVERSIGHT PROLONGS HIS LIFE TWO YEARS

(By Associated Press.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 13.—An oversight has prolonged the life of August Gober two years.

In 1906, just before the big San Francisco fire, Gober was convicted of the murder of Charles Hartman and sentenced to be hanged. Then came the holocaust which destroyed the records of Gober's trial. Gober had taken an appeal and he was sent to San Quentin penitentiary to await the outcome.

The appeal was dismissed in 1911, but for some reason nobody bothered about the resentencing of Gober, so he has remained in San Quentin.

Today, George Hartman, whose sons was Gober's victim, called the attention of Superior Judge Dunn to the slayer's protracted tenure of life. Gober was ordered to appear in court Saturday and be resentenced to death.

Heat a Menace to Lives of Old Folks

Sickness and Misery Result From Clogged Bowels in Hot Weather

People advancing in years should be very careful of their health during the hot months, as heat has a very enervating and weakening effect on them. One has only to look at the daily list of fatalities to elderly people reported by the papers to realize that these are the hardest months for them to overcome.

The easily digested foods should be eaten, and then only sparingly, and alcoholic beverages and iced things should be avoided as much as possible. Exercise should be taken daily in the shade. Most important of all in the maintenance of health and vigor at this time is to avoid constipation, with its accompanying headaches and muscular and blood congestion. This is accomplished by the timely use of a gentle laxative like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is the ideal laxative for elderly people, as it is mild, tastes pleasant and does not gripe. Best of all, it contains valuable tonic properties that build up and strengthen the system.

Elderly people should avoid strong physics, cathartics, purgatives, salts and pills, as they are a shock to the system. In the opinion of reliable people like Mrs. C. J. Nicholas, 2010 Emerson St., Berkeley, Cal., who esteems it a benefit to mankind, and Ida C. Milchsack, 210 N. Law St., Allentown, Pa., who declares that her stomach and bowels are now in perfect working order, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the right remedy to use. It can be obtained of any druggist at fifty cents or one dollar a bottle. The latter size is bought steadily by those who already know its value.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it, postpaid, by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 418 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.
